THE CUBAN REVOLT.

Successful Raids on Towns by the Insurgents.

Capture of the Town of Holguin and Fort Perriquera.

A Recapturing Force Repulsed with Heavy Loss.

The Cubans Withdraw in Good Order, Carrying Their Dead.

Excitement in Havana Over the Custom-House Frauds.

HAVANA, Dec. 28, via KEY WEST, Dec. 29.—The insurgents attacked Mayari on the night of the 19th inst. The town was in a defenceless condition, the regulars and volunteers being absent. The man-of-war Huires landed her marines and sailors, who drove out the insurgents, but, however, before the latter had sacked several houses. In the attack twenty Spaniards were killed. The insurgents succeeded in carrying off their dead and wounded.

About 11 o'clock on the night of the 19th, during the absence of the troops on an expedition, the insurgents, under the command of Vicente Garcia, entered the town of Holguin and captured Fort Perriquera. The Holguin volunteers had been previously ordered to march into the fort to replace the troops withdrawn, and as they approached, not aware that it had fallen into the hands of the enemy, they received a heavy fire from the insurgents. The volunteers and a few regulars subsequently attacked the insurgents, and messengers were dispatched to recall the troops. Operations were suspended until daylight of the 20th, when the insurgents withdrew, after leaving six Spaniards and a number of private houses.

A Spanish Lieutenant-Colonel, a Major, and several other officers were killed. Too many as to the total loss of the Spaniards are conflicting, some placing the figure as high as sixty killed. The Spanish account acknowledges twenty killed. The troops are moving rapidly in pursuit of Garcia, an index to avenge the death of their comrades. Full particulars of the affair are not given. Seventeen insurgents surrendered at Trinidad on Friday.

Gen. Riquelme has established his head-quarters for the campaign at Puerto Principe.

It is reported that Gen. Caballos will return to Spain upon the arrival of Gen. Cordova.

The Intendente has made public a number of fraudulent entries in the Custom-house, also the names of officials implicated in the frauds. These exposures cause much excitement among office-holders and merchants. It is reported that the Intendente will return to Spain shortly. His efforts to abolish consular frauds have been partially successful.

The family of Secretary Delano arrived here yesterday from New-Orleans.

Señor Puente, the President of the Spanish Bank, is dead.

The epizootic has broken out among the oxen in the jurisdictions of Cardenas and Cienfuegos. It is of a malignant type, and in many cases death follows immediately upon the animal being attacked.

Coming Events Cast Their Shadows Before—The Slave Sentiment—Nervous in Revolt—Slaveholders Alarmed—Indications of the New Cabinet.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Tuesday, Dec. 24, 1872.

The change in the Spanish Ministry, the meeting of the colored people in New-York on the 23d inst., the promise of Zorrilla to introduce a motion into the Spanish Cortes—these of three events would have been sufficient to astound all parties in Cuba from their apparent lethargy, and bring them to a vivid perception of the dangers which threaten this beautiful country. I purposely say this country, because the ultimate effect of these matters, which certainly will bear fruit in a longer or shorter space of time, will fall disastrously on Spanish and Cuban alike, it being impossible to foresee who will suffer the most. The blind leaders of the pro-slavery party neither see nor hear; they despise the distant rumblings of the thunder which announces the coming tempest; any change in the existing condition of slavery will add the country unprepared to receive the consequent upheaving of an ignorant and brutal multitude, or to repay the death-blow aimed against an institution condemned by Heaven and men. The pro-slavery party act as if they hated Cuba, and as if they took a fiendish delight in prolonging the present state of affairs, so that the coming blow will prove the common ruin of all, except the wealthy magnates, who, shielded by the bayonets of the Volunteers and regulars, manage to gather the utmost crop of spoil, and send the proceeds out of the country, caring nothing what becomes of the island afterward. And yet the pro-slavery party has everything in its own hands, and if they would only hearken to the more intelligent of their members by framing a law, emancipating from themselves, providing a stipendiary to the slaves, and granting them freedom at the end of a term of years, in the mean time introducing some ideas of religion and morality among the negroes, then there would be some hope that the abolition of slavery would not prove the common ruin of the island.

THE SLAVE SENTIMENT.

The negroes themselves are well aware of the existence of rankling; they know of the agitation by voice, pulpit, and tract in the cities of the Spanish Union and the powerful antagonism of Great Britain and the United States to forge the manacles which, with one hand, will weld their bodies, while with the other, will wield their spirits. Some things in a already occurred to the authorities and no small excitement has prevailed in official circles on Friday last, when the Lieutenant-Governor of Cuba, Vanderbilt and the Spanish Consul-General, had their houses guarded with armed men, and threatened to kill the officials and their wives, when rumored on the assassination of Mr. Backer, the white soldiers ready to fight and the negroes waiting for the word, being joined by the Spanish party of Havana, in a coup d'etat, proclamation, the leaders of the movement stating that they plans were not yet matured, and, therefore, commenced quietly to take advantage of Disraeli's and civil quarrels, and wait at each contingent to the discontented with the mother country which to the Spanish Cortes, stating that they had been assigned by and that they desired the maintenance of the Government. This statement may have been the only motive of their abandoning the plantations, as cases of a like nature have happened very frequently, yet the plantation owners in their publication because and still are greatly [illegible] that a conspiracy [illegible] among the colored people, probably created and fomented by the writer addressed to the Spanish Government. The utmost vigilance is exercised by the police over every plantation, especially as this is the season when the harvest of the sugar crop begins; and it is whispered that several of the hitherto most determined slave-owners have expressed a willingness to enter into the views of their more liberal compatriots. The Aurora newspaper, of Matanzas, calls this a strike among the negroes. A strike among slaves is a new thing.

INFLUENCE OF THE NEW CABINET.

The change in the Spanish Ministry, upon what appear to alter the aspect of affairs in Spain in regard to this island, judging from the following telegram, which Tomas Maria Mosquera, the new Colonial Minister, has sent to the Captain-General, and which has been published in the journals:

"My name, my precedents, and the conduct I have followed in the first Cabinet presided over by Don Ruiz Zorrilla, render unnecessary all manifestation on my part regarding the political conduct I purpose to follow, and which will be dictated entirely by the communications received of that island ward. I shall hold in abeyance all social or political questions till the conclusion of the war. I send your Excellency my compliments, and request you to present them to all those in the Cuban Archipelago, to the army, the navy and the volunteers, and to the other inhabitants of the island."

The Captain-General answered this telegram as follows:

"The Authorities, the army, the navy, and the volunteers, and the inhabitants of this Spanish province, send their compliments to Your Excellency, and congratulate you on your nomination. All expect from your Excellency's precedents, and from your love of the great Spanish interests in Cuba, that your Excellency will adopt such measures as will rapidly bring peace. All the inhabitants feel thankful for the certainty you give them that this soil will not be disturbed by any political and social reforms which might alter the conditions of wealth and prosperity of the island ever."

Similar telegrams and like answers have been interchanged between every new Colonial Minister and Captain-General; therefore they disclose nothing new.

WAR NEWS.

Brig-Gen. Prench has assumed command in the Jurisdiction of Bayamo....The Cubans attacked Fort Pilon, on the Nuevitas Railroad, a few miles from Puerto Principe, but as usual with them when attacking a fortified town, they were repulsed. An attack made on the 19th against the town and fort of Guisimaro, the first seat of the Cuban Government, was attended by a similar result, although the Cubans managed to rip, with the contents of some stores and some ammunition....An Adjutant of Gen. Rodolph, the Pole, who formerly operated in the Five Villas, was captured near the Trocha, together with a considerable party of men and women. Smaller engagements have occurred near Santi Spiritu and in other jurisdictions; the military state of affairs not having undergone any change of late, the Spaniards being unable to undertake the proposed operations of magnitude, owing to their want of troops. It seems now as if the promised twelve thousand men were not in some recruiting being very slow in Spain, although two hundred dollars bounty is now offered....The reports from the interior are meager and very conflicting. The Spaniards claim that they can crush the remaining insurgents easily, when the reinforcements arrive, and that the insurgents do not number 4,000. The Cubans, on the contrary, aver that this will be the last sugar-crop harvested under Spanish rule, and that the troops will not be able to defeat another Bayamo; they also say that they have 12,000 men under arms, and can easily increase the number to 30,000, if they could only obtain arms.

MISCELLANEOUS GOSSIP.

The Spanish frigate Isabel la Catolica has gone to Vera Cruz for the inauguration of the Vera Cruz and Mexican Railroad....Corocho Herrera who, while confined in the prison murdered another criminal was yesterday sentenced; this is the first sentence of a criminal which has taken place in a long time. ....Two soldiers of the Catalonian Volunteers robbed the regimental chest, containing twenty-eight thousand dollars, and have apparently got off the island with their booty....Some gentlemen connected with the Havana Press have gone to Vera Cruz and have thus inaugurated the American system of special correspondents. Even the Press is becoming Americanized; presses and types are American already....Mr. José Maria Morales, a retired merchant, formerly Senor Inter-Insular, returns with the United States, and holding a very prominent position here, being a member of the Council of Administration and Colonel of the First Volunteer battalion is seriously ill, and his death is expected hourly. No man in this Island of Cuba is held in higher esteem by the Spanish party of the population than Mr. Morales, and his death will cause universal regret. The growing tobacco crop presents a very fine appearance, but the Vuelta Abajo tobacco is fast losing its quality, and will soon have none of those peculiar characteristics which formerly distinguished it from tobacco grown in any other locality. The famous, in order to produce large crops and fine leaves, use guano to a great extent, and thus destroys the flavor and fine silken appearance of the leaf....The new Archbishop of Cuba has come from Spain to Santiago de Cuba direct. Gen. Francisco Lersundi Olivares has assumed the Political Secretaryship of the island.

QUASIMODO.

THE WEATHER.

Synopsis and Probabilities.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 30—1 A. M.—Northeasterly to north-westerly winds and partly cloudy weather have prevailed over New-England, with low temperature over the northern portion; south-westerly and north-westerly winds and generally cloudy weather over the Middle States, with rising temperature over the southern portion; light winds and clear weather over the South Atlantic States; increasing cloudiness, and easterly to southerly winds from Tennessee to the Gulf, with rain over the western portion of the former and Texas coast. Rain and very cloudy over the upper lake region and Northern Ohio, where cloudy weather is now generally reported, and southward to Kentucky and Missouri, with easterly to southerly winds; the temperature has risen from the north-west and upper lakes to the Gulf and South Atlantic coast.

PROBABILITIES.

For New-England, north-westerly to south-westerly winds and partly cloudy weather; for the Middle States, winds backing to south-westerly and south-easterly, and cloudy weather; for the South Atlantic States, light easterly and southerly winds and increased cloudiness; from Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Missouri southward to the Gulf, light to fresh easterly to southerly winds, cloudy weather and rain; from Ohio to Michigan and Minnesota easterly to southerly winds, cloudy weather, and areas of generally light snow. The temperature will very generally rise all the stations east of the Rocky Mountains.

City Meteorological Bureau.

The following record will show the changes in the temperature yesterday, with the average for the same, as indicated by the thermometer at Dickinson's drug store, No. 2 Park-row: 3 A. M., 18°; 6 A. M., 18°; 9 A. M., 20°; 12 M., 22°; 3 P. M., 25°; 6 P. M., 24°; 9 P. M., 24°; 12 P. M., 23°. Average temperature yesterday, 21½°.

The Fate of the French Troops.

M. Arnauld, says the Pall Mall Gazette, writes very despondingly to the Abeilleria des Saisons as to the disastrous retreat in the east, one month ago. He fully persuaded that in a few years scarcely one of the vines in Provence will have disappeared, unless some means of destroying the insect can be discovered. M. Cosme, who has been dispatched into the Bouches-du-Rhone by Government to report on the subject, has returned, and informed Government that in nearly all the vineyards which run down to the river banks the plants seem to have dried up, and that the vineyards in other situations have been affected in such a way that the revenue in consequence should be diminished. The cultivators accuse of "oil spots," which indicate that the malady has spread from the centre to the circumference. The phylloxera has not confined its attentions to the vine, fruit-trees everywhere in the same neighborhood having also suffered. It is agreed that as no remedy for the evil has been discovered, the utmost pains will be to trace it back to its places of origin in America, with a view to investigation by what process its excessive multiplication is prevented.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Three Members of the Cabinet to Retire in March.

Gossip About Their Feeble and Impossible Successors—History of the Treaty of Washington and Its Results.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 29.—This far it is known that three members of the Cabinet will positively retire of their own volition, on the 4th of March next, viz.: Messrs. Fish, Boutwell, and Williams. All of them will then tender their resignations, but only these three, so far as is now known, will decline further service. Secretary Fish will retire, in accordance with a determination long since expressed, although the President has recently expressed his very strong desire to have him remain in the Cabinet as long as he remained in the Presidency. Secretary Boutwell will retire positively, whether called to service in the Senate or not. Attorney-General Williams will likewise voluntarily decline further official service, in deference to insure business plans. Of course, nothing has been developed with reference to the successors of these gentlemen, and the mention of any names is, therefore, simply the reflection of current gossip, and current gossip mentions the name of Hon. E. Rockwood Hoar, of Massachusetts, for the State Department, and Hon. E. D. Morgan, of New-York, for the Treasury. The transfer of Secretary Delano to the same Department is also suggested.

THE TREATY OF WASHINGTON.

The entire official history of the proceedings under the Treaty of Washington is now being printed in consecutive order, and will cover three volumes of the usual diplomatic correspondence size. They will contain the American case as presented before the Geneva Tribunal, the British case, the counter-cases of the parties respectively, the journal of the proceedings, the award, the cases and counter-cases of the two Governments in the San Juan arbitration, and the award of the German Empire, thus comprising in compact and easily accessible shape one of the most valuable histories of international jurisprudence which the present century has produced.

THE INDIAN COMMISSIONERSHIP.

Although the salary of the office of Commissioner of Indian Affairs is but $3,000, and therefore not sufficient to induce the good and faithful an officer as Gen. Walker to resign, yet there promises to be no want of candidates willing to serve at a low price. Among the latest names mentioned is that of Dr. Weeks, of New-York.

THE REVENUE.

The public revenues for the present month, both customs and internal, are likely to prove the smallest of the year, and as the payments have been somewhat above the average, the reduction of the debt at the close of the month will be very small, if any. Now that the net internal revenue has, by the reduction of taxation, been brought down to about $94,000,000 per annum, there will occasionally be a month when the expenditures will exceed the receipts, unless the requisitions of the Departments be averaged through the year, as was the case before the war.

THE SPEAKERSHIP.

The statement telegraphed from New-York that Hon. William A. Wheeler had withdrawn his name as a candidate for the Speakership was not a legitimate deduction from the statements in these dispatches, wherein it was expressly said that he had positively declined to allow his name to be used. Never having been a candidate, he has, therefore, not been in a position to withdraw.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS IN UTAH.

Judge O. F. Strickland, Associate Justice of the United States District Court of Utah, has arrived in this city, and is stopping at the National Hotel. Judge Strickland called upon the Attorney-General on Saturday, and will tender his resignation to the President on Thursday or Friday next. It has become practically impossible to retain any judicial talent either on the Bench or in the District-Attorney's office in Utah. The United States District Court for the Territory renders decisions and makes decrees, but they are impudently set at defiance by the Mormons, and Congress fails to appropriate money to enable the Executive to set understood arrangement. No lawyer of self-respect and ability can afford to remain in such a position.

CLAIMS OF INSURANCE COMPANIES FOR WAR LOSSES.

The unfinished business in the Senate is the bill to pay the French Spoliation claims. But there is a general understanding that it shall not be taken up till the Judiciary Committee reports on the Alabama Claims bill, especially that part of it which relates to the rights of insurance companies, which will be taken up in some manner in both cases. It is conceded that where private individuals have been paid part of their losses by insurance companies, for that part they have no equitable claim upon the award. Treasury losses not paid by insurance companies should be paid in the instalments in full out of the award. The pro of the total award thus may not be required for this purpose will below either to the insurance companies or the Government. The insurance companies received, in the way of advanced rates, all they expected to insure out of the risks, and anything they may now get from the Government would be a clear salvage. It is evident that if the insurance companies' claims have any basis of equity, that the true basis of calculating it is to find the absolute amount received by them on account of the advanced rates, as which they charged in excess of ordinary rates, and compare this advanced receipt with the extraordinary or war losses, and then, if these losses were greater than the extra amount of premiums, allow the companies such excess. To this extent it is generally admitted the claims of the insurance people may be equitable. But it is believed the companies, on this basis of calculation, would get nothing at all, and most of them would prove to have made large sums of money from war risks.

SENATOR CALDWELL'S CASE.

The investigation of the charges of bribery against Senator Caldwell of Kansas, will resume very soon after the reassembling of Congress. Some of the witnesses have been summoned to appear Monday, Jan. 6, and others on the succeeding days. The examination will probably occupy considerable time, as there are a large number of witnesses. The subscription made some time ago that the case would make the investigation during recess was incorrect, and no such purpose was entertained.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

PARDON ON CONDITION OF COMING TO AMERICA.

An Elcott said of a person, by the Grand Duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin that the Count Daniel sentenced to American banishment, brought to the attention of the Russian Authorities by our diplomatic Representative at Berlin, assurances have been given that the pardons accompanied by a condition of that character will be complied with, as assured by the Grand Duke.

GOLD SALES AND GOLD PURCHASES.

The Secretary of the Treasury has authorized the Assistant Treasurer at New-York to buy one million of bonds, and to sell one million of gold each week during the month of January.

THE SUGAR INDEMNITY INVESTIGATION.

The Committee to inquire into depositions of Mexicans on the Texas frontiers, expect to resume their labors, on the 7th of January, at Corpus Christi, when Mr. Meade, one of the Commissioners, has resigned.

NEW WINE TAX REGULATION.

Strong efforts have been made recently to Prussian the abrogation of regulations of the Internal Revenue circular No. 164, imposing tax on sparkling and other wines manufactured from native wines, and providing for their destination to owners and proprietors. The Commissioner and Solicitor of Internal Revenue have now determined to replace said circular by a new one which will, when issued, establish substantially the following rule: Wine-makers may add to the pure juice of the grape whatever one, and so much of it added in Germany, France, and other wine-growing countries of Europe is making what are there sold, and with the knowledge of the additions are there accepted and used as pure wine, or in other words, whatever is represented and accepted as pure wine in those countries will be regarded as pure wine in this country, and will require no stamps; the purpose of the Internal Revenue Bureau being to prevent the manufacturer from stamping, upon wine made from a large quantity of wine-fruit, a small quantity of wine wine by the addition of foreign adulterants.

THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

Silver, Sutter County, Tax Money, Money Matters—Lumber Market—Mexican Revolution—A Shipwreck Imminent.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 22.—One hundred miners, of our Mountains and Bay counties yesterday against non-payment work. The strike had been working more hours a day. Both parties are determined to maintain their position.

There has been a heavy snow-storm throughout the Western Coast. In the San Joaquin Valley, an overflow is threatened. Several bridges on the Yuba River have been swept away. There have been two immense landslides in Oregon, on the line of the Northern Pacific Railroad. The tunnels will be displaced for two weeks to run out from either end. Much damage has been done on the Columbia River by lumber boats and floating off the logs. Navigation is impeded by floating the mouth of Willamette.

Charles Kraser, of this city, attempted suicide today in his store. He had a desperate struggle with his clerk, who tried to prevent him from doing so, during which Kraser's clothes were torn to pieces. He left table by one crowd with a razor, and fell dead near it, of old and fell dead in the floor. He was a German, and no cause for his act is known.

Martin Bertrand Hard, who was to be hanged at Sacramento, has escaped.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 23.—Last Friday the Peoria Phoenix Mining Company took possession of 160 feet of ground recently sucked by Raymond, Ely & Co. The ground is claimed by both companies. The Phoenix men erected a barricade on the ground and made other preparations to hold it against the Raymond, Ely & Co. Last night while Thomas Ryan, a Phoenix Company's workman was overhauling the barricade one of the Raymond, Ely & Co's men shot him through the head, killing him instantly. A general fight followed among the opposing parties, and forty shots were fired, but without any serious result. The Phoenix men still hold the ground. It was feared there would be more bloodshed this morning, but it passed off quietly. The man shot in the head was a Swede, named Jacob Swetzer, who came to work in the day. Hall is full of water.

There are prospects of a general break up of the ice to-night.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

The Shewhegan Hotel, Shewhegan, Me., Burned.

AUGUSTA, Me., Dec. 28.—About 8 o'clock this evening, a fire broke out in the Shewhegan Hotel, at Shewhegan, Me., and the firemen were unable to extinguish it on account of the reservoirs being frozen. The hotel was entirely destroyed, but about half of the furniture was saved. There were two stores under the hotel, one a millinery store, occupied by R. E. Flag, and the other a grocery store occupied by James Smiley. The goods were all saved. Mr. R. D. Stewart was quite badly injured by a man thrown from a third-story window striking him on the head. The stabled adjoining the House were saved. The cause of the fire was probably a defective chimney. The total loss will be between $60,000 and $80,000, insured for about $30,000.

Burglary in Philadelphia—$2,000 Worth of Change.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., Dec. 28.—This afternoon the gold-chain manufactory of A. Lobron, at the corner of Seventh and Jayne streets, was entered by thieves, who forced a burglar-proof safe and stole therein to the value of $2,000. Entrance to the premises was gained by false keys. The proprietor was at his place at 1 o'clock, when all was safe. No clue to the thieves has been discovered.

BY MAIL AND TELEGRAPH.

The weather in Maine is still very cold. The thermometer stood at 30° below zero at Bangor, 20° below at Waterville, and 15° below at Skowhegan.

The steam tannery of Messrs. Burke, Foster & Co., at Springville, Ky., opposite Zorth, Ohio, was destroyed by fire on Saturday morning. Loss: $60,000 on stock, insured, $18,000.

Henry Williams, employed at the Thomaston colliery, near Pittsburg, Penn., while walking on Saturday, slipped and fell off the down-hill slope. He was instantly killed, and his body barely recovered.

Bough and Tremaine Sent on a Wrongful Sheriff's Sale.

Patrick Connors, of No. 20 Seventh-street, went into Hugh Kelly's house-store, No. 216 Water-street, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. After drinking for half an hour, he engaged in an altercation with Kelly, who was behind the bar. Both words then came to blows, and finally drew their pistols and fired in each other. The foreigners in the room rushed out and secured the parties, having the last firing at each other. Several shots were exchanged, but the only result was a flesh-wound over Connors' left eye. The Police then took the two men, and both men were locked up in the Seventh Precinct Station-house.

THE ADRIATIC.

Plain Statement of the Facts in Relation to the Vessel.

What the Company Say Their Steer Tale Means and What the Steer Tale Has Brought—And Some the Again.

The excitement caused by the publication in the Times of the departure of the Adriatic in an unseaworthy condition, in Midwinter, and the newspapers in interview the agent of the line, on Saturday, with varied results, some of which are worthy, to show that all concerned were as anxious as ever for the safety of our passengers. It was not until the truth was told that any attempt was made to deny the statements which had been made respecting the state of the Adriatic, for the week previous. The official log of the ship first proclaimed the fact. The Associated Press reports made it broadcast, and it was common street talk. The public had been led to expect, from a report published, that the Adriatic would go into dock and be repaired, and every day since the disabled bed caused our reporter has kept a lookout to see her go into dock, so that he might note the condition of her screw when it came out of water.

The object he had in view was to see how readily the broken blades could be removed and new ones substituted. He did not dream that the ship would be sent across the Atlantic in such a condition, and when Friday came, and it was announced that her mails would close that evening at 5 o'clock, a reporter was sent to the office to ask when she would sail, and to procure a list of her passengers. He was told that she would sail on Saturday, but that refused to give a list of her passengers so to allow of a be born. He was immediately sent over to the White Star Dock to gather such facts as could be obtained. On his return the facts seemed to warrant that the condition of the ship should be made public.

Now let us see what the denials of the agents of the Company amount to:

The Commercial Advertiser reporter was informed by the agent of the White Star line that "the report which appeared in the Times of Saturday was false and greatly exaggerated. One (the Adriatic) has two blades entirely uninjured, and one-half the third and one-third of the fourth blade remain." He further stated that no intention was announced to put her in dock. It was found impossible. Respecting the time (fifteen or sixteen days) it would take her to repair, he said:

"This is ridiculous. We expect she will make the round trip in about fifteen days, allowing twenty-four to thirty-six hours beyond the regular time."

To the reporter of the Express, Mr. Sparks stated that she "had lost one third of one propeller blade and one-half of another," and that she "had taken out her usual complement of freight and passengers."

The Herald reporter interviews Mr. Sparks, and Capt. Perry, of the Adriatic. The latter says:

"Now as to the broken screw. It is a four-bladed screw, and our first impression was that all the blades were broken, and a thorough examination was made by a diver, who has given in writing a statement, showing that we have two blades complete, one-half of a third and two-thirds of another. If this can be called 'thoroughly damaged' then I don't know anything about seafaring."

The World says:

"On the recent message to this port, there lost the half of one over, and a piece of the propeller broke entirely off, and a piece amounting to one-third of another blade also broke, leaving her with one full blade and two-thirds of another. The writer had a conversation yesterday afternoon with a gentleman for many years connected with the Barometer Iron-works of this City, who thoroughly understands the subject. In answer to a question as to whether he considered a vessel disabled as the Adriatic is safe, he replied: 'She probably will be safer than usual on her present passage, from the fact that extra care will be used in steaming. The fact of the propeller blades will throw the weight all on the top of the shaft, and this will cause more or less jar to the stern of the vessel, more than there would be ordinarily; still, if the bearings are all right, if the shaft fits snugly, and there is no play, there is no great cause to be alarmed. In this case, if the jar and shaking of the vessel should cause the propeller shaft at last break the seat-iron plate through which the shaft passes and cause the vessel to leak. She'll have a fair wind all the way across, and I guess will go all right, but I should rather go to sea in her with her wheel all right.'"

The reporter who went to the Adriatic on Friday afternoon, and furnished the information that they "expected to steam in fifteen or sixteen days," has met a gentleman on Saturday evening while crossing on a Hoboken ferry-boat, and the subject of the Adriatic's condition was brought up. Said he: "I know all about her screw; my brother is the diver who went down to examine it; he tried to get the broken tubes (blades) off, but the bolts were so firmly entwined in that he couldn't budge them. It's a shame to send her to sea. She's only got one blade, and the stubs of three others."

That the agents of this Company did try to refit her screw cannot be questioned, for they sent their engineer up to the Morgan Iron-works to see if they could not procure pontoons so as to lift her stern out of water so that they might get at the screw. It was thought at the Morgan Iron-works that it was a risky job to attempt to lift a large ship at one end, as it might strain her badly.

The Herald further adds:

"If there have been a dock large enough to accommodate the vessel, remarked Mr. Sparks at this point, 'we should have had her put up as soon as she came in.' But there was no dock, and had not been able to do so is no fault of ours. The City is to blame for not having the proper accommodations."

Mr. Sparks must be ignorant of the facilities for docking large vessels in New-York. We have two sectional docks—one at New-York and one at Hoboken—"large enough to accommodate" the Adriatic. These docks have lifted over 20,000 vessels, of all descriptions, in fact an aggregate of 14,000,000 tons, without damage to a single vessel. They have lifted the Great Republic, belonging to the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, a vessel larger and heavier than the Adriatic. They have lifted the great iron-clad Dunderberg, built by Mr. Webb, and now in the French navy. These docks are complete, and would be glad of the job.

Failing to be satisfied with the accommodations of these docks, Mr. Sparks could have found facilities at the Erie Basin Dock, located at the foot of Hamilton-street, South Brooklyn, which are the largest of the private docks built on the Navy-yard Dock plan, in the United States. No. 1 dock is 300 feet in length, 120 feet wide at the top, and 60 feet wide on the floor or bottom. There are twelve feet of water over the sill, and low water and maximum tide at high-water. No. 2 dock is 400 feet in length, 60 feet wide at the top and 40 feet at floor, with maximum feet of water on the sill at low water, and twenty-two feet at high water. There are three cranes, fitted with lifting of fifteen horse-power, capable of lifting 1,000 pounds per minute. The main operating machine is of the horizontal style, the cylinders operated by two working engines of fifty and thirty horse-power respectively. The water capacity of the docks is 2,000,000 gallons, and it requires about three hours and a half's time to pump them dry. The Dock Company have every facility for discharging, storing, and loading cargoes on their premises. The offices of the Company are at No. 6 Sterling-place, within one minute's walk from the offices of the White Star line. Mr. Sparks has used these docks once to fit blades on a broken screw of one of the Company's steamers. So much for Mr. Sparks' (possibly unintentional) attempt to injure the reputation of this port as to its facilities for repairing damage to any class of vessels.

Now, a word as to the "indictment" of the report furnished to the Times on Saturday. It was written by a gentleman who has been at sea for nearly twenty-five years in every capacity, and whose experience and knowledge only lie his writings to consideration and confidence. It was written in the interest of humanity, and with a desire to state only plain facts and truths. The White Star line was not selected for an attack because it was a White Star line, but because it was a White Star line vessel that was unfortunate enough to have her screw crippled. We would not allude to this, but from the fact that Mr. Sparks has in all his interviews with the reporters of the Press laid great stress upon this point. We have no means of knowing how Mr. Sparks noted the condition of the Adriatic to Mr. Cheeseman to induce him to consent to allow the mails to go on board of her. When a representative of the line called upon us to deny the statements, we made on Saturday, he was asked to furnish us with a certificate from the diver who examined her, but he refused. As to denying the statement that it was concluded that she would go into dry dock, we hold that such an announcement was made in the daily Press, and that such an act was contemplated is proved by the fact that Mr. Sparks said that "had there been a dock, &c., we should have had her up at once, and 'tis as a dear error." That they tried to do something, is proved by the fact that they went to the Morgan Iron-works to procure pontoons to lift her, a measure which all reliable engineers would laugh at.

A Card from the Agent of the Line.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your comments in regard to the steamer Adriatic, of the White Star line, have evidently been reported from erroneous information, and are calculated to give rise to groundless apprehension.

A comparison of the logs of the steamers which sailed from Liverpool during the same week as the Adriatic, all encountering weather of the heaviest character, affords ample testimony not only of our steamer's seaworthiness, but also that her speed is not seriously impaired.

Steamers.	Sailed from Liverpool.	Position 12th Dec. Lat.	Long.
Manhattan	4th Dec.	42.50	47.00
City of Paris	4th Dec.	42.19	49.19
Canada	4th Dec.	42.11	52.22
Adriatic	4th Dec.	42.30	52.40
Abyssinia	7th Dec.	42.19	52.19

It was on the evening of the 12th inst. that portions of two blades of the propeller were broken, and from that time the Adriatic steamed steadily against the contrary gale, although with reduced motive power, the Captain wishing to guard against running short of coal—a predicament that has this year compelled so many steamers to put into Halifax—arriving here on the 16th, after a very fair run for the season. Of the above fleet the City of Paris arrived at Sandy Hook on the 16th, the Abyssinia and Canada on the same day as the Adriatic, and the Manhattan on the day following. On examination of the propeller here by divers, it was found that the injury was not nearly so serious as anticipated. Their report is as follows:

The White Star steamship Adriatic was thoroughly examined by me on Tuesday, Dec. 24, 1872, and found as follows: Two of her four-bladed blades in perfect order and secure, the other two being broken, one blade having one-fourth broken, the other having one-third broken off. [signed] J. W. LOWE, Submarine Engineer and Diver, No. 12 Exchange Building, New-York.

In order to carry out the wishes of the managers of this line, and not break faith with the public, the passengers, the postal officials, and all inquiring, we made aware of the precise facts. I have no hesitation in affirming that the Adriatic left this port yesterday as seaworthy as any steamer sailing with her, and, although I do not authorize my name to be used, I am confident that her timely arrival will dispel any anxiety your informant may have excited.

I am, your obedient servant,

T. H. SPARKS,
Agent White Star line.

The Course of the Times Indorsed by the People.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

On behalf of a large number of readers of the TIMES, let me thank you for your able exposition of the unseaworthy condition of the Adriatic, previous to her sailing for Europe with the United States mails on board. We are glad to see a paper bold and honest enough to make public the facts of her dangerous condition before she sailed, rather than to bemoan her loss after her destruction was insured through the niggardly management of the agents of the line. We, in common with the general public, hope that you will always give us timely warning when such craft are going to sea. Most papers are afraid to tell the truth, lest they might lose some little advertising patronage, but the TIMES is above such considerations. Why does not the White Star line publish the affidavit of its diver, which, if he tell the truth, will show that the Adriatic went to sea with only one of the four flukes of her screw. I have talked with numerous people, who say it was an outrage to send the Adriatic to sea in such a condition. Pray God that she arrives safely.

On behalf of many of your Jersey City readers.

RECENT MARINE DISASTERS.

Condition of the Vessels on the Massachusetts Coast—Bodies of Ten Men Discovered.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 30.—The German bark Frauens, from Shampoer, for Boston, ashore near Highland Light, Cape Cod, remains tight, and lies easy, though badly laid up, 200 feet from low-water mark. Capt. Korting, of the Frauens, who had been ill for three weeks, died on Provincetown yesterday, and will be buried to-morrow.

Three bodies have been washed ashore at Peaked Hill Bar, all perfectly nude. Only one, that of J. H. Blake, first mate of the Peruvian, is recognized.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 30.—The ship Peruvian, from Shampoer, ashore on Cape Cod, has been broken into fragments. Three bodies have been recovered, one of which is that of Thomas H. Barnes, the first mate. The rudder with which she was taken is being continually washed up on the beach, and is being saved under the direction of the underwriters' agent.

About 1,000 bales of hemp have been dragged ashore from the wreck of the bark Kalosh, at Point Allerton. The bodies of Capt. Mathews and the seven seamen lost have been recovered. The German bark Frauens, from Shampoer, ashore on Cape Cod, has warped further up on the beach, but in other respects remains as before reported. There is not much water in her. The steamer Charles Pearson arrived alongside on Sunday morning with hawsers, and began lightering the cargo. Capt. Korting, of the Frauens, died on Saturday night.

A Vessel Sinks on Fire—The Cargo Scuttled with Water.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Dec. 29.—The British barq J. E. Dutton, of the port, for Boston, with a full cargo of upland cotton on board, took fire on Saturday night in the cotton forward. It was filled with water by the engines and sunk at the wharf. The damage to the cotton by salt water is large. It will be discharged.

Wreck of an Admiral Line Steamer—Loss of Eighty Seven.

The London Echo of Dec. 19 states that on the 8th inst. a large barq, timber-laden, from Amsterdam, bound to the Bristol Channel, went ashore on Scarlock sands, about ten miles from Harwich. Two men, alighted, made on board, and the crew of a shipwrecked vessel picked up on the Kentish Knock. Only ten succeeded in getting on shore, eight lives being lost. No names were ascertained.

THE FRANCO-GERMAN WAR.

Lively Discussion of the Duc de Grammont's Disclosures—Austria's Attitude Shown from Official Documents.

LONDON, Dec. 29.—The Austrian, French, and Prussian newspapers are engaged in a lively controversy over the disclosures made by the Duc de Grammont in regard to the origin of the late war. The Duc brings documentary evidence to support the truth of his assertion that Austria promised to assist France in case of war with Prussia. He publishes an Austrian dispatch to the French Government, in which the pledge is given in the following words:

"YOU OUGHT TO BE SURE. We will contribute to the success of the French arms."

It is reported that the Austrian Government has determined to dispense altogether with the services of Count von Beust.

Resignation of the Minister to the Vatican—Political Capital Made From It.

PARIS, Dec. 29.—M. Bourgoing, the French Minister to the Papal Court, resigned, because some French naval officers in Rome at the beginning of the holidays called on the King and the Pope on the same day and tendered the compliments of the season. The monarchists seek to make political capital out of the affair. The Union published an address praising the Minister's act as a striking disavowal of the policy which would abandon the Holy Father to spoliation and insult.

Slight Accident to President Thiers—The Minister to the Vatican.

PARIS, Dec. 29.—President Thiers visited the English Embassy yesterday. On leaving the building he fell, and suffered a slight contusion of the hip and elbow, but was able to be present at his reception this evening.

Manifesto of the Republicans in the Assembly.

The Republican members of the French Assembly have issued a manifesto, of which the following is a translation:

DEAR FELLOW-CITIZENS: For the last three weeks France has been agitated, work has slackened, business has been checked, anxiety has taken possession of the public mind, the national existence has been, so to speak, suspended. This uneasiness is caused by the divided state, from which the Assembly appears unable to issue, which renders the Government of the Republic powerless, and destroys in its germ all hope of stability. Honest but timid minds have hitherto believed that circumspection, prudence, temporizing, would suffice to put an end to this situation. Illusion is no longer allowable. The recent votes in the Assembly show that a majority can neither establish itself there nor even be formed there. Thus the Government, so far from being able to govern, seems sometimes

LOUISIANA.

Further Dissection of the Address of the Citizens' Committee.

Federal Officials and Their Intervention in State Affairs—Warmoth and His Foes—Statements of the Address Condoled.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Availing my self of your liberal courtesy, I proceed to make a closer and more critical examination of the carefully and sensibly prepared statements contained in the address to the people of the United States, issued by the Committee of Citizens of Louisiana, now present in New-York, for the purpose of presenting their side of the story. I propose first to examine what this address contains, and shall then set forth some important and material facts which the Committee, or rather their Chairman and Counsellor, has purposely omitted to mention.

1. The first averment to which I object is that the "events" which the Committee profess to describe were "entirely brought about by the agency of officers, civil and military, of the General Government." Even in a technical and literal sense, this I deny to be in accordance with the facts, but if it were true, I see no impropriety in such officers aiding the people of Louisiana to defeat the machinations, the selfish and corrupt schemes of such a contemner of law and justice as Gov. Henry C. Warmoth admittedly is. There was a time, and that not long since, when the leaders of the Louisiana Democracy were in close council with those very officers of the General Government for the purpose of devising measures by which this man Warmoth might be driven from the power and the position which he had so excessively abused. We heard nothing at that time of the impropriety of these officers coming to the help of the oppressed people of Louisiana. What we did hear was that, as those very officers had been instrumental in fastening Warmoth upon that people, and enabling him to ride roughshod over them and their liberties, it was their duty to render assistance in bringing his reign of tyranny to a speedy termination. The cabinet of the President of the United States contains many a telegram and letter from prominent bankers, merchants, lawyers, and other citizens of New-Orleans, beseeching him in the most earnest terms to come to their aid against this bad man, even if he had to stretch the laws in so doing. Gen. Grant was urged by those persons to declare martial law, and to send a military Governor to Louisiana, that an end might be put to the flagrant and intolerable misgovernment which Gov. Warmoth was practicing there.

2. The second point in the address of the Louisiana Committee which I desire to notice is this: That the officers of the United States Government at New-Orleans have been engaged in "a conspiracy to overthrow the Government of the State."

My first answer to this allegation is that the Government of the State of Louisiana has not been overthrown, and there is no evidence, except the mere assertion of this committee, that there was any purpose or attempt to accomplish such an object. That Gov. Warmoth, personally, has been overthrown, and deserved to be overtaken by such a fate, is most true; but I apprehend that an individual holding such an office may be impeached and suspended for crime or misdemeanor while the Government itself continues to be constitutionally administered. I can only account for this confusion of ideas of the distinguished author of the address, by attributing it to the stress he was laboring under to make it appear that the actual Government of Louisiana had been overthrown, and not the man who was at its head. It is easy to be seen that the Committee could excite no indignation in the North, nor elicit any sympathy by the story that such a man as Warmoth had been beaten at his own game by the Republicans of Louisiana. Therefore they sounded the tocsin that the Government of the State had been overthrown. Mark how plain a tale will put to silence a charge of this kind.

The election held in the State of Louisiana on Nov. 4, 1872, was managed by Gov. Warmoth, with the aid of the Democratic State Central Committee. Their plan was to throw every obstacle in the way of the registration of colored voters—a process preliminary to the election. The Registrars were all, or nearly all, Democrats—at all events in the more important parishes they were of that stripe of politics. Their instructions were to exhaust every device to lessen the registration of colored voters and increase that of the white voters, especially those of Democratic proclivities. These instructions emanated from Gov. Warmoth and B. F. Shanchard, Chief Supervisor of Registration, one of his tools, and they were faithfully executed. The result was that upward of ten thousand persons, entitled by law to be registered, were prevented from complying with that formality by the devices and obstacles thrown in their way by Warmoth's officers. This is not mere assertion. I have myself seen and read the sworn statements of respectable Democrats of Louisiana, detailing, circumstantially, the acts of these Registrars which had the effect I have stated. I will cite one—that of Robert A. Hunter, of Rapides Parish, Louisiana, a lawyer of prominence, a Democrat unquestionably sincere and orthodox, and a citizen whose reputation for honesty nobody will dispute. Well, Mr. Hunter swears that 1,800 colored voters of his parish failed to have their names inscribed on the registration books through the fault—nay, the crime—of the officers in charge of that process, and after those voters had exhausted every effort to accomplish it. The same tricks were resorted to in other populous parishes, and Rapides is a fair sample of how the thing was done throughout the State. I cannot understand how gentlemen professing to be candid, truthful, and impartial can say they have "no knowledge of any trickery, say fraud, in the election, and do not believe any such existed." The Committee, perhaps, do not think the colored voters constitute a portion of "the people." I rather think that is the explanation of their statement on this part of the subject.

3. The next point deserving of notice is that "Gov. Warmoth was not a candidate for reelection." As a mere matter of fact this is true, but it is what the lawyers style a suppressio vari, which is a suggestio falsi. Gov. Warmoth desired to be re-elected, but was told that it was impossible, and he compromised upon a promise to be sent to the Senate of the United States, which promise the Democrats had it in their power to perform, for the scheme of the campaign included the election of a sufficient number of Democrats to the new Legislature who would necessarily be subservient to the will of the leaders of the party. Now, as a particular friend and protégé of Warmoth's (J. R. West) held the other Senatorial position at Washington, representing Louisiana, this arrangement left Warmoth, perhaps even more power over the fortunes and Government of the State than if he had been re-elected Governor. It substituted for him Col. John McEnery, a very excellent, well-meaning citizen, but a man of weak character, who would be under the control of the Democratic leaders and utterly unable to govern of and by himself. I might say more of Col. McEnery's unfitness for the position of Governor, but prefer to confine myself to the objection just mentioned, which is certainly sufficient, if true, to have excluded him from the candidacy at such a juncture as this. The controlling question in the campaign became this: Shall we be in danger of anarchy in the State, and the measures to be taken to ascertain whether it was or was not binding upon the people, yes have an explanation of the fraud of which United States Senator Pinchback, who was a member of the Democratic party, and a most excellent citizen, was the victim, and which Gov. Warmoth, whose assistance could not be dispensed with for years to come if the Democrats were to be in power, and the bankers, capitalists, money-brokers and real estate owners of New-Orleans were deeply interested to have it paid.

4. The next interlocutory of the address is that which relates to the removal of B. J. Herron from the office of Secretary of State by Gov. Warmoth on the day that the Registration Board of Elections were to count the returns. Mr. Herron was a member of that Board, but had refused to make or join in making such returns as Warmoth desired. Therefore he must be had to come off. Now, the Governor had no power under the Constitution or statutes of the State to remove, by his fiat, or mere fiat, any officer, much less a constitutional officer. So he trumped up an accusation against Mr. Herron that he was a defaulter to the State, and could not hold office, and by virtue of what he styled an "Executive order," enforced by a submissive police organization of which the Governor was the head, he drove Mr. Herron from the room occupied by the Secretary of State, in the State-house, and installed, by the same process and means, a follower of his own, named Frank Wharton. This proceeding was without even the color of legality. Mr. Herron was appointed by Gov. Warmoth to the office of Secretary of State more than a year ago, and no defalcation to the Treasury existed then if it exists now. He was then his intimate friend and confidant, and was not removed to do the Governor's bidding, it was the Governor who made 1872 Mr. The Supreme Court of the State have decided that the appointment to the office was illegal. The Committee say "we have no reason to believe that the action of Gov. Warmoth in the removal of Herron was based upon a desire to commit fraud, for, why should the Governor of 20 counties go to commit fraud?" Indeed! How did Gov. Warmoth know what the returns of the election would show? They had not been counted at the time; at all events, they had not been legally counted. It be time at that time what the returns would show, he must have had his minions counter in secret. The Committee say and of Herron's removal was prompted by Gov. Warmoth's discovery of a plot between Herron and Lynch (another member of the Board) to falsify the returns and defeat the election. They was not candidate at the election, whose Warmoth had a deep interest in the result of the election, as I have shown.

5. The next averment in the Committee's address is that an injunction or restraining order was illegally issued by the United States Circuit Court against "the State Government," and against "the Governor of the State," at the suit of W. P. Kellogg, the Republican candidate for Governor. Now, the fact is that no such injunction or restraining order was issued. The proceeding of Kellogg was not against the State Government, or against the Governor of the State, but against Henry C. Warmoth and others individually whom he had pretended to appoint as members of the Returning Board of Elections. Mr. Warmoth was a member of that Board, but not as Governor of the State, and if he was proceeding illegally as such member of the Board, he could certainly be restrained without interfering with the Administration of the Government. I am willing to leave that to any unprejudiced lawyer in New-York or elsewhere. And if Warmoth could not be restrained by a judicial order from acting unlawfully, the other members of the Board could be beyond a doubt, for they were no part of the State Government. But the fact is that Gov. Warmoth, in his capacity as a member of this Board, was only restrained from counting the votes for Governor and by the method which he intended to adopt. He was not restrained or enjoined from performing any of his constitutional functions, for Judge Durell is too good a lawyer, too learned a jurist, to issue an order of that character. The order was issued to prevent fraudulent returns by Gov. Warmoth and his appointees, and to prevent mutilation and destruction of the returns, as which Mr. Kellogg had an unquestionable interest. If such an injunction had not been issued, it is my opinion that Mr. Kellogg's right to the office of Governor would have been defeated by unlawful means. The act of Congress which was framed and adopted to prevent just such a result. Mr. Kellogg's position or suit in Chancery upon which his suit was founded was drawn by one of the most experienced Chancery lawyers in Louisiana—Mr. J. R. Beckwith, who is the appointee of the Circuit Court for the District. Evidence to show that the proceeding was in all respects in conformity with law and the practice of the Court, and was simply one preventive of wrong. The votes cast in Louisiana on the 4th of November last have not been counted by Judge Durell, nor did he overthrow the State Government, unless the overthrow of Warmoth personally includes the Government. He merely ordered Judge Durell has decided that the returns of the election should be deposited in his Court, with the Clerk thereof, that they might be counted by the legal returning officers. Warmoth has been impeached and suspended from office by the Legislature, and the person acting as Lieutenant-Governor by virtue of his position as President of the Senate has constitutionally assumed the functions of Governor. This individual happens to be a colored man named Pinchback, who was a Senator when Lieut.-Gov. Dunn died, and elected to the Presidency of the body at an extraordinary session called by Gov. Warmoth. It is well known in New-Orleans that there was a struggle to prevent Pinchback's election, and that it was effected by the intrigues of Warmoth's friends. Gov. Warmoth, now, conceding that Pinchback's term of office as a Senator has expired, he continues to act as Lieutenant-Governor until the Lieutenant-Governor elected on Nov. 4, 1872, has qualified and been inducted. This by express provision of law.

I might go on expanding other misstatements made in this address, but believe I have said enough to prove that full faith and credit should not be given to so partisan a document, and close by annexing hereto one of the passages of the address, every word of which is true. It proves, to my mind, the necessity for such a law as that enacted by Congress in 1870, for the purpose of preventing a continuation of such wrongs.

"The Committee take the liberty to say that they have had no connection with these suits as parties or advisers; neither have they had any of the officers in dispute. They have not had cognizance of, nor in the controversies among the political classes which have endangered the peace of and brought scandal upon the State, during the last two years. For years there has not been good government in Louisiana. There has been corruption, prodigality, dishonesty, and waste in the public expenditures, though the City of New-Orleans has enjoyed only with little corresponding benefit. The credit of the State has been given to speculating corporations for personal gain. The taxes on property have assumed such proportions that it has been impossible for the proprietors to the state for its occupation and use. The taxes upon business oppress the commercial and laboring classes. The laws of control elections, for registration and election, have been perverted to the success of office-holders, and the consequence is, corrupt and contested elections. The State needs an honest, faithful, and responsible government, conducted in strictly public interest, and not to enrich its members or to perpetuate their power. There was a great effort to obtain such a government at the last election."

Railroad Accident in New-Jersey—Collision Near the Bergen Tunnel.

AT 8 P. M. on Saturday an accident of a serious nature occurred on the Erie Railroad. The Erie express-train, which left Long Dock at 7½ P. M. with two locomotives, came into collision with a freight-train coming from Weehawken, and bound for Jersey City. The freight train consisted of five cars, three of them being coal-wagons and two United States rolling-stock carriages. The freight-train, when it arrived about half a mile west of Bergen Tunnel, endeavored to switch off on to what is known as the Eastern track. This was a slow process, in consequence of the state of the road, and before it could be completed, and while the train was still upon the main track along which the express-train was to pass, the latter came up with its two engines, traveling at the rate of about twenty miles per hour, and a violent collision occurred. The five cars of the freight-train were almost entirely demolished, and the forward engine of the express train severely damaged, and finally thrown over on its side into a deep cutting on the west side of the track. The other engine and the passenger and baggage-cars were thrown back a considerable distance by the concussion, but remained no damage. At the first shock of the collision the engineer on the forward engine jumped off into a heap of snow, and escaped injury. The fireman fell into the cutting with the engine, but was not injured. The five cars composing the freight-train bore the brunt of the collision, and were completely demolished. The only freight carried by them was a quantity of coal, which was strewed over the track and the cars, generally served to add to the confusion without causing loss to anybody. A number of men were telegraphed for from different points on the road, and in a couple of hours the expressing was cleared and the road was ready for business on its journey, but at midnight the tracks were entirely cleared of the debris and traffic resumed. Yesterday a number of men were on the ground removing the fragments of the injured wagons. The loss from the accident will not be over $7,000, $5,000 of which is to be borne by the United States.

A Thirty-One-Hours' Session—An Old Man When a Wagon.

From the Vallejo (Cal.) Chronicle, Dec. 14.

Jimmy Kennedy finished his thirty-one-hours' dance at 5 o'clock last night. Jimmy kept in locomotion throughout the whole time mentioned, only taking a brief recess at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon for the purpose of nothing his feet and having a brief respite. At that time he showed few symptoms of exhaustion. His feet were slightly swollen, but he otherwise seemed as fresh as when he commenced. His actions were marked by the same wild, brandy-and-water spirit, and he exhibited no signs of fatigue. He is a most excellent specimen of a man for the purpose for which it was used. Before the expiration of the 31 minutes Jimmy began to feel sleepy, and was tried to keep his eyelids apart as much as possible. At frequent intervals he drank wine with raw eggs as an invigorant. His appearance was somewhat worn, but he was generally. When the last twenty minutes before the elapse of the thirty-one hours had come, Jimmy began to feel exhausted and "Gentlemen, I'm done for, and cannot last longer." He commenced to flash and more towards then when the first began, and he danced the last three dances with an energy and enthusiasm which would have led to that a count of sixteen strong, in fact, dancing with a vigor when 9 o'clock struck, but kept on going for nearly ten minutes longer. When the feat was finished he departed with his trainer for his lodging, where he was placed in a hot bath, rubbed down and put to bed. The spectators during the evening enjoyed themselves in singing and dancing, and passed the time very agreeably. Jimmy slept calmly and peacefully until 7 o'clock this morning. When he arose, and dressed himself. He made his appearance on the street this forenoon, apparently as fresh as ever. For a person sixty years of age this feat which he has performed is truly remarkable.

"Red-tapeism" was certainly never carried to a more extreme point, even in the Circumlocution Office itself, than by the authorities of this City in reference to the Centre-street fire. The fire took place last Tuesday evening. It is known that seven persons perished in the flames. Yet the week was permitted to close without an effort being made to recover the bodies from the ruins. If we were savages, we could scarcely show greater disregard of decency. Whose fault it is that nothing was done until yesterday we do not know. One "Department" had no authority; another had no money; a third did not see how it could interfere. Meanwhile, seven dead bodies lay on the edge of a crowded thoroughfare, and there was no one to give them Christian burial. The authorities may think that this is all right, but the public will come to the conclusion that it is all wrong, and that somebody ought to be held responsible for what is an outrage upon humanity.

We shall, no doubt, receive some hundreds of letters during the next few days concerning the condition of the streets. We wish to say to our correspondents, before they write, that it will scarcely be just to be too severe upon Capt. THORNE and the Street-cleaning Bureau. Such a fall of snow as we have had overtaxes our resources—all the forts in the City could not carry it away. The storm of last week was one of those events which occasionally take the conceit out of mankind, by showing them on what a frail foundation their civilization, and all the comforts arising out of it, really rest. We can get along very well until a tempest or an earthquake happens, and then we are of about as much use as mites in a cheese. It is of no use expecting Capt. THORNE and his men to be a match for the elements. We can vouch for the fact that all night on Friday and Saturday, and again last night, hundreds of men were hard at work on our principal thoroughfares, cutting foot-roads through the snow, digging trenches, and cleaning the gutters. This is about all that can be done at present. At any rate, let Mr. THORNE and his staff have a fair chance, and do not raise a din about their ears because they cannot perform impossibilities.

In reference to the Adriatic, the agent of the White Star line writes to say that we have exaggerated the injury done to the steamer by the gale which she encountered on her way here. We beg to inform Mr. SPARKS that we merely repeated the account of the injury given in the log of the Adriatic. His diver may tell a different story now, but this is what the ship's log says—and Mr. SPARKS is not wiser than a ship's log.

"Steam-ship Adriatic, (Br.) FERRY, Liverpool Dec. 2, via Queenstown 7th, with mdse. and 188 passengers, to J. HYDE SPARKS. Arrived, 7½ P. M. Dec. 13, 7 P. M., lat. 42 35, lon. 66 12, spoke ship Allen, (of Glasgow) from Baltimore, N. B., for Liverpool, rudderless and waterlogged, and took off the Captain and crew, and brought them to this port; 12th, 1:30 A. M., shipped a very heavy sea fore and aft, and carried away two and part of third bloom of propeller; 20th, lat. 42 41, lon. 66 12, passed a Cunard steam-ship bound E.; same day, lat. 41 27, lon. 64 30, passed a bark-rigged steamship bound E. The Adriatic experienced very heavy westerly weather, with rain most of the time."

Again, the New-York Maritime Register, a good authority, thus described the accident, last Thursday:

"STEAMERS.—Adriatic, (Br.) from Liverpool, at New-York Dec. 21, shipped a very heavy sea fore and aft, at 1:30 A. M. on the 12th, and carried away two and part of third blade of the propeller."

These are the statements which we repeated on Saturday. If Mr. SPARKS thinks them "injurious," let him complain to the Captain and officers of the Adriatic who made up the log.

Mr. VAN SCHAICK, of the Board of Supervisors, did his best on Saturday to frustrate the most fraudulent which have been attempted in connection with the Tweed ring. Supervisor COONEY, thought, that the whole matter was nothing but a contest between the officers of different departments," but Mr. VAN SCHAICK replied that it now looked as if somebody wanted to make $50,000 at the expense of the public. A special committee was appointed to inquire into the affair. Mr. VAN SCHAICK may depend upon it that he is on the right track, and we have no doubt he will do his duty faithfully.

Emigration from Europe, but especially from Germany and England, to this country promises to be unusually large this year. We hear that efforts are being made to secure concerted action in the matter of sending emigrants to the United States, but what the National Agricultural Laborers' Union of England, and the German Emigration Association. Even should these efforts not be successful, it is very probable that during the next Summer we shall find emigrants flocking to our shores in greater numbers, and, upon the whole, of a better class than ever before. In anticipation of this it is the duty of Congress to take speedy action to prevent these people from being robbed upon their arrival. We should long ago have had a National Bureau of Emigration, with agents at the principal seaports to give correct information to those coming from abroad, and to furnish them with transit from the landing depots to their places of settlement at the lowest possible cost. We have left these emigrants at landing too much to the mercy of State agents, and we cannot too soon give them that protection of the National Government which is plainly their right.

The Republican Opportunity at Albany.

As the result of its triumph at the polls in November, the Republican Party will, on Wednesday next, become invested with full executive control of New-York State and City, by the installation in office of Gen. JOHN A. DIX as Governor, and Hon. WILLIAM F. HAVEMEYER as Mayor. Aside from the political importance of these events, they will be of great interest from the fact that it has been some years since either of the offices in question have been filled by incumbents who received Republican support. Gov. HOFFMAN has been four years in Albany, where he was chiefly distinguished as the instrument of the Tammany spoilers; and for almost a decade prior to the attacks of this journal upon the Ring this City was under the undisputed control of the same spoilers. The inauguration of these two officials will mark, therefore, the commencement of an entirely new epoch in the administration of public affairs.

On the Tuesday succeeding the events to which we refer, the Legislature will assemble at Albany, and the Republican Party will then be face to face with the responsibility placed upon it by the people at the polls. That the majority of this Legislature was elected in the name and interest of Reform, as fully as were Gen. DIX and Mayor HAVEMEYER, cannot be questioned. That it is the duty of the Republican members to work in harmony with these officers, for the release of our politics from the domination of cliques of trading politicians, is too plain to admit of argument. The people did not intend, by placing the Republican Party in power, to merely substitute one Ring for another—to banish the Tammany Democrats from public place, only that corrupt Republicans might fatten in their stead. On the contrary, it was intended to make an end of government for the benefit of a class, and that the least worthy of all classes; it was the intention to subordinate all personal "claims" to the general welfare, without reference to any partisan needs. It was for this high purpose that the Republicans were given control of this City and State, and not that they might perpetuate the system of TWEED for the benefit of another and equally rapacious clique, because it may choose to call itself "Republican."

All schemes, therefore, either here or at Albany, looking to the perpetuation of this system will be damaging to the Republican Party in proportion as they are successful. Trading with OAKEY HALL for office is not the way to secure future Republican victories, and the transfer of such tactics to Albany will inevitably be fatal to the party. We hear of "slates" being arranged, and of charters being cooked up, which are to be sprung upon the Legislature, and an effort made to rush them through under the party lash. If the majority submit to this dictation, a very grave blunder will be made. We do not speak in behalf of any individual, and we are not even wedded to any one plan of reform, but we do earnestly desire that the Republican Party shall not again be brought to harm by the mistakes of its Legislature. We believe that a large majority of the members will go to Albany determined to honestly carry out the objects for which they were elected, and the only danger is that they may succumb to combinations intended to sacrifice them and the party to selfish ends. There is in the Republican Party, as there has always been in all parties, a few men who identify themselves for the future organization, and it is these men who are dangerous at such a time as this. Some of them may not be corrupt, but they are the victims of corrupt men, and are deluded with the idea that the way to party success in the future is to seize every possible office for the present benefit of party hacks. This was the creed of the Tammany Ring—and any party which adopts it must certainly soon resort to practices as corrupt, and in the end meet with a fate as ignominious.

If the Legislature will listen to the voice of the party at large, and turn a deaf ear to those few self-appointed leaders, it will escape the only serious danger to its honor and usefulness. We know that it will be beset with temptations, and that it will be constantly harrassed with cries that Republicans must reap the benefit of a Republican victory. That is true enough, but in respect to this City, the question of the permanent success of the reaping deserves the most careful consideration. The Republican Party will be in a minority in the Senate, and in the Assembly it is composed almost in the majority of the members, and which institutions are based all in the whole community, have been paying taxes, citizens, and even actually performed for money. Thus unchecked things that ought not to exist, and the remedy is not in giving Mr. BOOTWELL, or any one else, the sole power to interfere, at his own ill-informed and irresponsible discretion. It is to make banking, and the issue of bank-notes, with the present indignants as to the latter, perfectly free. It is now shown to be impracticable to arbitrarily regulate the financial affairs of the business community. The community now want a chance to regulate these affairs for themselves.

The Bonds of Our Canals.

We recently pointed out the advantages our State would be sure to reap from the funding of the Canal debt. We showed that if this were done, by means of bonds running forty years, at five per cent. interest, the revenue of the canals, at the rate for one year, would provide a sinking fund to pay the bonds at maturity, would pay the annual interest, and would meet all ordinary and necessary repairs, and leave a surplus, to be devoted to the reduction of the debt, of at least a million and a half of dollars.

Mr. ISRAEL T. HATCH, a gentleman well known for his untiring advocacy of this method of dealing with the canals, has published some very interesting calculations concerning the probable future of our canal system, if funding and low tolls shall be adopted. He shows that under the low toll policy, so far as already carried out, the carriage of "perishable food," as it is called, has very largely increased, has, in fact, nearly doubled, while the revenues have risen from $2,811,776 to $3,070,000 for last year, and (estimated) to $3,500,000 this year. Without any increase in the revenue, it is plain that the tolls on cereals, which constitute about one-half the canal revenue, might be taken off entirely, were the debt funded.

Mr. HATCH also points out the measures necessary to prepare the canals for their full usefulness under the new system. They are simply the dredging out the main canal to its full depth—seven feet—which need not cost over $270,000, and the completion of the double locks, for which, we believe, an appropriation has already been made. With these measures carried into effect, it is estimated that the maximum capacity of the canal would be equal to some 18,000,000 tons, or 500,000,000 bushels. The average capacity of the canals would be at least 8,000,000 tons or 250,000,000 bushels. The heaviest receipts of cereals at Chicago, Milwaukee, Toledo, Detroit, Cleveland, and Dulutb, from Jan. 1 to Nov. 30, were 118,055,031 bushels of grain, and 3,859,480 barrels of flour. This amount of grain and flour would, in weight, be not more than 3,000,000 tons, and would not equal one-half the average capacity of the improved canals. As to time, it is to be said that a steam canal-boat has gone to Troy from Buffalo in five and a half days, and a steam tow has taken 28,000 bushels of wheat from Buffalo to this City in ten days.

This presents a hopeful picture of the future of the canals. It is the business of the next Legislature to do its part toward making this picture a reality. The first step to that end is the passage of the bill submitting the funding project to the people. To that measure the Republican Party is fully committed. It commands the confidence of the business men of the community, and there is no question that the success of the Republican Party was largely aided by the hope that it would adopt a progressive and prudent policy with reference to the canals. We are confident that the Legislature will not disappoint that hope.

Quick Transit—A Beginning to be Made at Last.

The heavy snow-storm has revived for the fiftieth time the discussion of the question of rapid transit in this City, and the demand is again universal and imperative that some speedy and practical steps shall be taken for the relief of our citizens. The same arguments are adduced to prove, what for fifteen years has been self-evident, that the great and pressing necessity of New-York is quick transit by steam from one end of the island to the other. It has been shown over and over again that the actual expense—to say nothing of the inconvenience—entailed upon our citizens by one storm like that of last week, is more than sufficient to pay the annual interest on the cost of an under-ground railroad from the Battery to Harlem. All this, and much more, has been proved time and again; and yet nothing practical has been done in the way of building an under-ground railroad, and nothing is likely to be done.

Why? Simply because capitalists cannot be found, either in this country or Europe, who are willing to advance the money necessary to carry out the enterprise. Competent engineers, both English and American, have decided that there is but one natural route for an under-ground railroad lengthwise of Manhattan Island, and that is under Broadway and Fifth-avenue. Any other route, even if it were practicable, would involve a much larger outlay than the one, and it is even questionable whether a road built on this line would prove to be profitable as an investment. But there has always existed, and still exists, such a strong prejudice among property owners on the line of these two streets against the construction of a steam railroad beneath their surface, that no arguments based on grounds of public necessity have thus far been able to prevail against it. While Fifteen was the minimum, a charter passed both Houses of the Legislature, granting to the Manhattan Railroad Company the right to build an under-ground railroad, via Broadway and Fifth-avenue, from the Battery to Harlem River; but it was vetoed by the Governor, at the instigation of property-owners on these streets, and all subsequent attempts to get a charter by the only practicable route have failed.

It is said that foreign capitalists stand ready to advance the required means to build an under-ground road by this route, but they peremptorily refuse to invest their money in any other route so long as this one remains unoccupied. It may, therefore, be regarded as settled that if we are to have quick transit under ground through New-York, the work will have to be done at the expense of the City. VANDERBILT's charter, which was lobbied through the last Legislature, and from which the public were led to hope for something practical, has been abandoned, as the TIMES stated several weeks ago. The "Central Under-ground" charter has been in existence five years, with less prospect of anything being done under it now than there was in the beginning.

Unless the City is prepared to go into the business of railroad building at an expense of $35,000,000, all further talk about under-ground quick transit through Manhattan Island might as well cease. Some less expensive means of rapid locomotion must be resorted to, or our citizens may make up their minds to rest content with the horse railroads, and stop grumbling. We have got to accept elevated roads, or give up the idea of quick transit altogether for some time to come. In view of these facts, the progress of the quick-transit scheme, known as "Gilbert's Elevated Railway," becomes a matter of no little public interest. After a good deal of delay, it was said that the Commissioners who were designated by the charter to fix the route of this road have at length completed their labors, and the work of building the road is to commence forthwith. The road is to run up on the east side of the City and down on the west side, making a complete circuit of the island, with a double track the entire way. A beginning is to be made, we understand, at the junction of Chambers-street and Broadway, and the projectors of the enterprise promise to complete a double-track as far as Forty-second-street in Sixth-avenue, during the coming year. The road is to run eventually from the Battery through Washington-street, Sixth and eighth avenues to Harlem River, thence along the river to Second-avenue, through Second-avenue to Twenty-third-street, thence through First-avenue and intersecting streets on the east side of the City to the Battery again—a single train of cars making a complete circuit of the Island. There being two tracks, cars will run simultaneously in opposite directions, affording accommodation every three or five minutes for passengers going up or down either side of the City. It is promised that the entire circuit of double-track road shall be completed in three years. Past experience, however, has shown that rapid transit promises are not to be relied on, and, if the Gilbert Elevated Road shall prove an exception, the public will be duly thankful.

Monster Cones.

Lord CASTLEREAGH, appearing once at Vienna in a plain black suit, without decoration of any sort, in the midst of a brilliantly-bestarred assemblage, was said to be the most distinguished-looking person in the room. So, at a certain period of the rebellion, it came to be rather a distinction not to be a brigadier-general. But people, as a rule, are not content with this negative kind of celebrity, and sigh for more substantial honors. The appetite, indeed, for visible marks of distinction is an intelligible one, and even, to a certain extent, praiseworthy, since the vanity which craves to be thus singled out among men may also prompt men to deserve the honor. To stimulate such impulses toward excellence, stars and garters were invented, and they have undoubtedly had their uses. Even that tendency, amusingly satirised in the Biglow Papers, which impels third-rate savans to find a facitious importance in flying long strings of letters after their names, like the tail of a schoolboy's kite, has the merit, at least, of being inoffensive, if not elevating. These alphabetical glories are undoubtedly a comfort to their possessors and their possessory families; and why should the unlettered world begrudge them? To be sure, when these insignia of learning are adopted for the purpose of imposing on a confiding public, as in the case of the medical diplomas so freely issued by a certain sot-disant university in Philadelphia, where the harmless, necessary alphabet is thus made the instrument of deception and fraud, one must protest. But when a man's LL. D. or F. G. S. or D. C. L. is honestly come by, even if not strictly deserved, why should he be called upon to hide these splendors under any envious bushel?

It was apparently some such train of reasoning which lately led two ingenious Roman gentlemen to a notable device for filling their own pockets, and at the same time gratifying a reasonable and harmless vanity of their friends. One of these philanthropists, Signor DANZZI by name, being a clerk in the Department of Public Instruction, had facilities for securing blank diplomas of a much-coveted decoration, known as the Crown of Italy. The demand for Crowns of Italy being greater than the supply, it occurred to Signor DANZZI and his friend, Signor FRANCHELUCCI, to start a small private manufactory of their own, which they promptly did with energy and success. Among their first customers there came, we regret to say, two fierce republicans from Paris, an Austrian, and a Florentine tailor, each of whom the two crown dispensers agreed to make happy for the consideration of 7,500 francs. The money was paid, but the diplomas were wanting until a further advance of 4,000 francs was secured, making about $2,300 in all. Thereupon certain papers were produced purporting to confer the desired distinction, whereupon the four applicants departed rejoicing, only to find that the precious documents were forgeries, and that the only distinction they would derive from them would be the undesirable one of proclaiming their own folly in the witnessing of the humiliating trial of the fraudsters. One can hardly feel much sympathy for the two recreant republicans, nor, perhaps, for the Austrian, who should have learned by this time to cease hankering after the Crown of Italy; but to the luckless tailor, thus cruelly disappointed with his own goose, one can hardly refuse a modicum—a ninth part, let us say—of compassion.

The moral of this sequence is that people who are about buying decorations had better go to the legitimate manufacturer, or, perhaps, wiser still, follow Tweed's advice to people about to marry. The satisfaction to be derived from a purchased honor, one would think, cannot be very great; and the mischance of this hapless quartet may have the effect of warning others of this class, who are proverbially thought to be easily parted from their money, that a franc in the hand is better than two crowns in the bush.

MINOR TOPICS.

It seems a little absurd to the ordinary republican mind that the French Minister at Rome should resign because some French naval officers, on Christmas Day, called on both the King and the Pope. Is it the duty of M. TISSOT's representatives in the Holy City to compel his companions to the public service to either insult the Pope and ignore the King, or else to insult both? The "incident" tickles the Monarchists, who, though they include most of the sensible public men of the country, are reported to be foolishly demonstrative in honor of the resignative Minister.

M. DE GRAMMONT, formerly a Secretary of State for the now nearly forgotten NAPOLEON III., is making an awkward situation for the Austro-Hungarian Empire. He claims to represent a note addressed to his imperial master by Austria in the following terms: "Your cause is ours. We will contribute to the success of the French arms." Prussia can afford to ignore this evidence, even if authentic, of Austria's ill-will, and was undoubtedly well informed of the facts at the time; but it is exceedingly embarrassing for Austria since the meeting of the three Emperors.

Before the Post-office Department insists further upon doing the telegraph business of the country, it should very greatly improve the express service which it has undertaken. It is well known that many of the packages that are sent through the mails arrive at their destination in a very dilapidated condition. This is especially true of books, which often have the wrappings torn off, and not only the covers, but many of the leaves defaced. This is so evidently the result of carelessness, that we hope the Postmaster-General will make an effort to accomplish a reform in this matter. If he does not, the public will use the private express companies in preference to the mails, and in addition will become more convinced that a Department which cannot do an express business acceptably is not likely to give satisfaction in operating the telegraphs. In fact, it is becoming more clear with experience that the more closely the Post-office is confined to its proper duties, the more likely it is to satisfy the public.

The World has been giving some excellent advice to Mrs. TROLLOPE, which it is earnestly to be hoped that venerable lady will thankfully receive. The World remarks that she has recently journeyed across the Continent from San Francisco, en route for England, from Australia. Why she made this journey, which her friends must regard as an unusual proceeding, does not appear. However, the World thinks that she now has an opportunity to write a handsome apology for the unpleasant things which she once said of this country, and advises her to lose no time in improving it. While there may have been no difficulty in the way of such a journey by a lady situated as Mrs. TROLLOPE probably now is, there is an insuperable obstacle in the way of her writing an apology—unless, indeed, she could enlist the services of some spiritual medium. After all, it would hardly be worth her while to trouble herself about the matter now. When one has been dead for nine years, as is the case with Mrs. TROLLOPE, she should be excused for declining to meddle with purely worldly concerns.

What does the inspection of buildings by the Fire-Marshal accomplish? In the case of the Fourteenth-street circus building, it appears that the issues were ordered to make such changes as were deemed necessary to render the building comparatively safe against fire. This they declined to do, and the only consequence was a threat that the insurance companies should be informed of the refusal. A year ago the theatres were inspected, and in many of them a dangerous condition of things was found, and which the proprietors were ordered to remedy. A year afterward these same theatres are again inspected, and it is found that in more than one the orders given a year ago have not yet been heeded. Now, unless the Fire-Marshal has authority to compel obedience to his orders, and the courage to enforce such authority, his inspection of buildings is a sham. We ought to have not only a thorough inspection of all buildings, but an immediate carrying out of such orders as a competent Fire-Marshal may issue. Inspections that accomplish nothing are worse than useless, since they only bring the inspectors into contempt.

There are several things very unpleasant in the facts connected with the brutal cock-fighting at West Troy on Friday. It is not encouraging to find that such exhibitions are not yet extinct, and it is no more so to find that after Saratoga, which can placidly winks at faro banks all Summer, refused to permit this environmental wise, the chief official of that interesting and evidently moral village was foremost among the spectators of the barbarism. Indeed, we are told those present were by no means exclusively of the rougher class, and that every body seemed "entered the sport kindly." When men having any pretensions to decency can enjoy seeing two birds kill each other, it is evident that there is urgent need for missionary work among us. As that seems impossible, we hope every one engaged in this "sport" will be made to pay the full penalty of the violated law. Mr. BERGH could not find better employment in the interests of humanity than in ferreting out some of the "gentlemen" who are said to have been present on the disgraceful occasion, and bringing them to punishment. It is the encouragement which this sort of "sport" receives from men who money to bet that perpetuates the barbarity, and it is these men, therefore, who most deserve condemnation.

In our commercial department this morning will be found a series of interesting comparative tables of prices of the leading kinds of domestic produce and general merchandise, as the close of each of the years 1871 and 1872. At the close of 1871 gold was quoted at 109¾; yesterday the quotation was 112.

ORDINARY.

The inhabitants of the Fiji Islands are dissatisfied with their Government, and are "plotting" against it. Their Government consists of a native King, who does nothing, and a European Premier, who does everything. The new settlers in the islands are confident with the present state of things, but the people, by which term the native Fiji islanders are meant, prefer the former despotism of their native chiefs. What the particular grounds of their dissatisfaction are does not appear. In all probability, however, like most political movements in Polynesia, the threatened revolution in the Fiji Islands is primarily due to the unexpressed appetite of the people. The latter have only recently been compelled to abandon cannibalism. They are daily exasperated by the sight of succulent settlers and appetizing missionaries who land on their islands, and, by the heartless connivance of the ruling powers, are permitted to go away again uneaten. Hence the dissatisfaction of the Fijians, and hence their "plotting"—in the shape of stones and clubs—against their tyrannical Government.

Rody Tyndall and the Tribune have given the Editor of the New-York Times a fright.

Having for greater season to congratulate myself on the troublesome time to disturb the peace of the society of Christian men, I should be exceedingly unwilling to seem of regard which might be needlessly unpalatable to them. But I had been distinctly and circumstantially informed that, in one of the prominent pulpits of this great City, not only were my notions of religion handled with severity, to which I have no manner of objection, but that my visit to this country had been spoken of as a money speculation. This I thought a case of striking below the belt, and it drew from me the mild remark on which you have commented in a recent number of the TIMES.

The mistake, however, has been brought to me this day, that my informant indulged in an inference instead of stating a fact, and that no such language was used toward me. I hope, therefore, the reverend gentleman to whom I referred, without naming him, will permit me to offer him a friendly hand, and to express my regret that any word of mine, founded on misinformation, should have given him a moment's pain or uneasiness.

Your obedient servant, JOHN TYNDALL.

"Independent Journalism."

From the Brooklyn Union, Dec. 27.

The following statements were made yesterday to one of the reporters of the Union in regard to the recent sale and transfer of Tribune stock from Wm. Orton to Whitelaw Reid and John Hay. A friend of Mr. Orton was waited on, and asked to tell the Union what he knew about Orton, Colfax, and the Tribune. He hesitated somewhat, but finally thought no harm could result to any one by the publication of the facts in the case. The friend of Mr. Orton referred to asserted that as (Mr. Orton) had made a "wonderful escape" in getting rid of his half-a-million elephant; that the property so highly valued a short time ago was now in reality worth but little more than the value of its real estate, presses, &c.

We give below the interview:

REPORTER—Can you tell me, Sir, why Mr. Orton sold his interest in the Tribune?

ANSWER—I think I can, Sir.

REPORTER—Will you do so?

ANSWER—I will, but I forbid the mention of my name. You see, Mr. Orton is what may be truthfully called a smart fellow. He never engages in any business which he thinks will not pay. When the Tribune was offered for sale he believed that it was a very valuable property, and that it had some 200,000 weekly subscribers, a very large daily circulation, together with an immense advertising patronage. He thought of his old friend, Vice-President Colfax, and came to the conclusion that he would be just the man to fill the editorial chair. He commenced the negotiation to purchase the controlling interest in the paper, and succeeded in closing the bargain. At the same time he opened a correspondence with Vice-President Colfax, with very prospects of success. During this interim he commenced an examination of the affairs of the Tribune, and, to his utter astonishment, learned that the circulation of the Weekly Tribune was falling off at an alarming rate, with the prospect of a collapse in that important department of the paper. He also found that the daily circulation was considerably under 20,000, and that the main dependence of the paper was upon its advertising patronage, which would be likely to fall off as soon as the facts in regard to the circulation of the Weekly and Daily were fully known by the public. The longer he continued his investigations the more satisfied he was that it would be a herculean task to prevent an immense loss on his investment. In the meantime, Mr. Colfax had some doubts about his moral right to vacate his office in order to accept any business proposition. He had made a promise to retire to South Bend at the end of his term, and could not easily change his programme. He asked Mr. Orton for more time to consider the matter, proposing to go to Ohio and consult with his friends during the Christmas holidays. Meanwhile Mr. Orton received a proposition from the friends of Whitelaw Reid and John Hay in the Tribune to repurchase his stock. Mr. Orton seized upon this opportunity, broke off the negotiations with Mr. Colfax, and promptly accepted the offer of Reid and others to repurchase his stock, giving competitors the opportunity which is offered to get rid of his great elephant. That is the secret of this sudden change. Mr. Orton was unwilling to take the great risks involved in so large an investment of money. He was satisfied that there was no prospect of any immediate returns. Both he and his friends say that he somewhat resembles the Indian who "wonderful escape." Has now affirmed that the circulation of the Weekly Tribune has fallen below 20,000, and is going down at a fearful rate daily.

REPORTER—Are there any other facts which you can give in relation to this affair?

ANSWER—I think I have given you all the important information, and you may rely that what I say is true.

This closed the interview.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY,
No. 19 EAST FOURTH-STREET,
NEW-YORK, Dec. 28, 1872.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The donation from Poor Little Jane-Fisher-Wife of $5 it was acknowledged in the TIMES of Dec. 18. That of Dr. T. Fabz Gerrard for $50 was acknowledged in the TIMES of Friday, Dec. 13.

The donation sent us by Mr. Horn, of $50, in 1871, was acknowledged in our annual report of that year. We have lost him a copy of this year's report, and asked for further information in relation to the missing check, and also sent our report for 1871, to show that his prey-ous donation was received.

The donation of $20, from "Hemplina", was received by us on the 26th inst.

Yours truly,

Steinway Hall.
SECOND SYMPHONY CONCERT.

The second of the series of six symphony concerts, programmed, with the co-operation of Mr. Thomas' orchestra, and under the direction of Mr. Thomas, at Steinway Hall, took place on Saturday evening. The character of the audience afforded the habitual proof of the interest with which these entertainments are regarded by the most appreciative part of the public, and the members of the association were as free from grumbling than its quality. The promise of the programme, and the certainty of as perfect a rendal as can be achieved the world over, justified, as usual, the attendance. Beethoven, Weber, Liszt, Berlioz, and Bruch were the composers represented on the occasion. Mr. Thomas' men have frequently played the Sixth, or "Pastoral" Symphony, but each hearing of that superb and thoroughly intelligible composition awakens a livelier admiration of its performance. Good as earlier renderings have been, that of Saturday certainly exceeded them, and it is only by remembering how Mr. Thomas' orchestra, shaled from its formation, has kept on surprising the critics, year after year, that we are inclined to admit the possibility of a bettered exposition. It is unnecessary to say that while the delivery of the four movements of the symphony were all of festive for the Adelphi as to the connoisseur, it was accorded throughout by the conductor's intent to good Beethoven's injunction that the expression should be sentimental rather than pastoral. Mr. Thomas' partiality for programme music has frequently, and diminished his reverence for the older and certainly purer purposes of his art. The peculiarity we speak of surely exists, and four of the five orchestral choruses of the bill of the second concert supplied evidence of it. Conspicuous mainly by their elaborate instrumentation, the selections played after the symphony were all the offspring of the plans and aspirations of latter-day writers. Berlioz's "King Lear" overture, Liszt's symphonic poem, "Die Hunnenschlacht," and the two excerpts from Wagner's scores are of proverbial difficulty of execution, and they desire by a mixture of tone akin to that of the pictures most praised by Ruskin. While Wagner's compositions, however, are the clearest in respect of ideas and drawing, the impression of no one of the works can be readily made to fill the outlines limned by the printed text. The overture by Berlioz is at least meaningless; in the symphonic poem, the opposition of church music, sounded on the organ, to the barbaric strains of the band, may be accepted as a felicitous illustration of the struggle of Christianity against idolatry, while everything else is vague; the introduction and finale of "Tristan und Isolde" and "Der Ritt der Walkuren" are conceived and instrumentated after the familiar Wagnerian formula, and are not to be mistaken as part of the achievements of the author of "Der Tannhauser." The pieces above named, which were faultlessly read by the orchestra, were supplemented by Max Bruch's violin concerto, recited by Mr. S. E. Jacobsohn, a competent violinist, but one lacking the essential, without which the performance of the finest of violin music has neither eloquence nor charm. Mr. Thomas' next concert is to occur on Jan. 11. Mr. Rubinstein is to be the soloist of the night.

RUBINSTEIN CONCERTS.

The first of a series of three concerts to enlist the services of Messrs. Rubinstein and Wieniawski, and of Mr. Thomas' complete orchestra, will be given at Steinway Hall, to-morrow evening. We subjoin the programme for the entertainment—one of the finest, in point of sterling merit and general interest, ever intended for delivery at a popular concert:

Overture, "The Water-Carrier" ..... Cherubini
Orchestra.
Concerto, No. 3, G major ..... Rubinstein
Mr. Anton Rubinstein.
Concerto, for violin, D major ..... Beethoven
Mr. Henri Wieniawski.
Symphonic poem, "Tasso" ..... Liszt
Orchestra.
Kreutzlerana ..... Schumann
Mr. Anton Rubinstein.
Adagio, Romance } for violin, } ..... Rubinstein
Polonaise } Mr. Henri Wieniawski.
Ballade, Scherzo, Nocturne, } ..... Chopin
Mr. Anton Rubinstein.
Huldigungs March ..... Wagner
Orchestra.

ITALIAN OPERA.

Mme. Pauline Lucca and Mr. Maretzek's artists have returned to this City from Philadelphia. One week's respite from their labors will be allowed them previous to the inception of the Boston season on Monday next. Mme. Lucca has been seriously ill, but is now convalescent.

Dramatic.

THE THEATRES TO-NIGHT.

There will be a change of bill at Booth's Theatre this evening, when Mr. Edwin Booth will commence an engagement as Richard III., as Shakespeare's tragedy.... The production of a fresh burlesque, called "Jack, the Giant Killer," at Wood's Museum, is also advertised. Elsewhere, the representations of the week just ended are to be repeated.

BENEFIT PERFORMANCES.

The proscenium boxes of the Academy of Music were sold at auction on Friday, for the dramatic entertainment to be given on Thursday next, for the benefit of St. Ann's Fair. The sum of $[illegible] was realized. There will be an afternoon and an evening performance, on the day mentioned, and several popular members of Mr. Daly's companies, including Mrs. John Wood, Mr. Brougham, and Mr. James Lewis, will appear.... A performance in aid of the members of Mr. Barnum's late company who suffered by the recent fire, will be given by the Equestrian Benevolent Association of the United States, at the Academy of Music, on Tuesday, Jan. 7.

Can We?

From the Boston Commercial Bulletin.

Now that Mr. Gould has made his settlement with the Erie Directors and paid their little bill of $6,000,000, we can afford to dismiss his case.—New-York Tribune.

Can we? Can we afford to say to the robber who invades our house and steals our property: "Return this at your earliest convenience, and we will dismiss your case!" If so, why can we not equally well afford to compound all thefts upon the basis of restitution, at such times as shall suit the thief's pleasure? Why not dispense with such cumbrous and expensive—we had almost said useless—institutions as jails and Judges, police and prisons, Courts and constables, and settle all criminal matters upon some such mercantile basis? Why not say to every offender: "Make good the wrong you have done, restore things to the condition in which you found them, and enjoy immunity from punishment?" Of course, if the offender has had no money or from the use of the stolen property, so much the better. It proves his shrewdness and skill as an operator—that is all. If "housing" is a crime, it is certainly not the less, why not make the same treatment other punishment? If a clerk steal from his employer, why incarcerate him? Let him make restitution and go in peace.

Two Black Sheep Blue Nearly An Accident in a Moonlight Ride.

From the San Francisco (Cal.) Bulletin, Dec. 11.

Several nights ago, a young gentleman of this city invited a lady to accompany him on a moonlight ride. At the appointed time the wagon was at the door, and together they started for the City Hotel. During the ride the conversation turned on things supernatural, and the Donovan ghost was discussed at length. The gentleman professed to be free altogether from that dread of the mysterious unknown which affects weak people, preferring to wander about grave yards after nightfall, or sitting alone with the dead. He declared that he would even be willing to have a tête-à-tête interview with any ghostly visitant who might choose to make him a call in the still hours of night. At this, a couple of black sheep, primarily at the rear of the horse, heads were raised behind. The road was deserted, the pleasure-seekers had all returned, and as they bowled along the smooth road, still they conversed on the supernatural. When a short distance beyond the cemetery, the horse stopped suddenly and began to trouble and snort violently. The driver stood up in the wagon to find the cause, and lo! a coffin lay at the side of the road. The moonlight shone on the silver plate, and the courageous young man immediately let go the reins and dropped into the bottom of the wagon as if he had been shot. The lady fortunately caught the lines and then prevented a runaway and probably disaster. As soon as the gentleman recovered the presence of mind which had fled from her presence, he ordered the undertaker's cart drove on, and the driver disappointed, asked the young lady, "Get up," said the lady. "Is that horrid thing gone?" groaned the gentleman, and ventured to peep out from the buffalo robe in which he had wrapped his pallid face. It appeared that the undertaker was carrying the coffin to a house on Geary-street, when his wagon broke down, and he was compelled to leave it on the roadside while he returned for repairs. The gentleman drove meekly home, and has not since been heard to declare his indifference to ghostly visitations.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Law Reform.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Under the head of "Law Reform," in your issue of this day, appears a communication from one of our predecessors, suggesting a reform in the law relative to pleas in civil actions, under the "code"—by which, as I understand the writer, is meant "the code of civil procedure"—"making it perjury on the part of any person who should make an affidavit that the facts stated in a pleading are true, of his own knowledge, when it can be shown that the same are absolutely false." If I have understood the writer correctly, the check to which he refers was procured from the defendant "after considerable dunning and threats of suit," and, being afterward protested for non-payment, an action to recover on the original account was commenced against him; when he, in the way of a defense, interposed a verified answer, through his attorney, setting up as a defense the premature bringing of the action, before the credit had expired, which "Lawyer" pronounces an "unmeaning falsehood"—a perjury, if you please—for which no penalty is provided by the "Code," &c. As a stranger to all the parties, and without discussing the merits or demerits of this defense, I venture to say that "Lawyer" has not placed the entire defense before you, and for the purposes of this communication it matters not whether he has or not. He is not the only lawyer who has sought to bring to punishment the dupes of those who are supposed to know not only law, but also what a litigant may or may not safely do in actions commenced under the "Code."

It would, indeed, be a strange anomaly in our civil administration of justice if our "Code" should venture into the field of our criminal law by defining and prescribing a punishment for perjury committed in the verification of a pleading, to constitute which the falsity of the answer or plea must of necessity be measured by the intentions of the pleader at the time of making the verification, and not by the facts as they appear, for may it not very well be that every material fact averred is false? But, according to the pleader's understanding, it does not so appear. Yet a reform is suggested in the law to that behalf; where as a at glie glance at part 4, title 4, chapter 1, article 1, section 1, of the Revised Statutes, further his a remedy for this class of offenses, as perfect as any Legislature can make it. "Lawyer" has evidently overlooked this important feature of the difficulty of which he complains, and I apprehend the gentleman has closed his profound legal knowledge-box against the fact that not a single answer, whether true or "false," is at any time interposed in an action, unless framed by the legal representatives of the defendant, in whom, nine cases out of ten, all the facts connected with the subject-matter of the litigation have been communicated, and on of which the defense is framed. Of course, there are many highly honorable and worthy lawyers in our midst who flatly refuse such professional engagements as require the putting of an answer "without a verification." If those who may yet attain eminence would be a little more circumspect in advising the interposing of such defenses, ("Lawyer" included, perhaps,) the gentlemen's views on this class of grievances would entirely change.

It is hard to tell how he who desires plead or frames the mind of another for the commission of a crime is a principal in the eyes of the law, and as guilty as he who commits it? And yet, upon the theory of "Lawyer," no matter how weak the understanding of the client may be, nor how little he may know of the legal effect of a "verification," and notwithstanding the fee he has paid for doing what he may have been advised is legal and proper to do, he (and not his adviser) must suffer the penalty and agonizing attendant upon the discovery of the untruthfulness or falsity of his answer. That a reform is needed in these matters no sane lawyer or layman will doubt; but that suggested by "Lawyer" is not the proper one. The reform must begin in the very sanctum whence it had its birth, and when that is once put in motion there will be less "dunning and threats of suit," and such a course would certainly "meet with the approval of Judges, lawyers, and all others interested in an honest administration of justice in this State." Until that period arrives, "Lawyer" will find an ample remedy against the repetition of the offense complained of in the statute above cited, and in sections 3 and 5 of the same chapter. LEX.

Second Fires.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There is nothing so alarming at the present time as the prevalence of extensive conflagrations in our City.

The origin of these can almost invariably be traced to what are called "defective flues." Now, what is the reason that so many defective flues are built? The answer is, that many owners of property, through parsimony and carelessness, endanger the lives and property of their neighbors by employing blundering, ignorant, and irresponsible persons to erect their buildings. Such persons will undertake almost anything; they will attempt to put up a structure in two months that cannot be properly built in less than six, and, as a consequence, the work is thrown together without plan or detail drawings, and by inferior workmen, who are here today and gone to-morrow. Now, to avoid fire in buildings where powerful furnaces are run up to their full capacity in severe weather, (burning from a half to one and a half tons of coal per day,) it is absolutely necessary to plan the flues so that at least eight inches of solid brick-work is placed between them and the floors and lathing; to build them with the best quality hard-burnt brick, laid with close joints in pure lime or cement, mixed only with clear sharp sand; the joints should be all thoroughly filled and pointed up carefully on outside and inside. Besides this, the floor timbers must be framed around the flues so that eight inches of solid bricks and mortar will separate them from flues.

The writer has had much experience in the erection of public and private buildings in New-York City, and has often had old buildings taken down, (to give place to others,) in which ample evidence of criminal negligence was exposed—open joints connecting flues with beams; soft bricks, four inches thick originally, crumbled to powder; and worse still, timbers projecting directly into flues, and these often in a charred condition! The only reason why such buildings occasionally escape the flames is that they happen never to have been used for any purpose where a powerful furnace or range was necessary.

The only way to remedy this state of things is for responsible owners to employ in all cases experienced and reliable mechanics to plan and superintend the erection of their buildings, and to take their advice as to who shall execute the work, as even they (the architects) cannot watch every brick laid nor every timber placed; and the wall-liers, however, to maintain their reputations, must know exactly who to select as their foremen. A merchant, for instance, is no judge as to who is competent and who is not. He very often, however, and no doubt with the best of motives, recommends to a particular friend persons who are perhaps very skillful architects and builders, but who to his extraordinary mind, to be intrusted with the commencement job, and such as no good workmen will accept employment from.

There are numerous "shells" run up in the most careless manner in our City, and we wonder to hear more of them do not burn down; and many will continue to erect them as long as the laws permit it, and as long as insurance companies will issue policies upon them. J.

Our Street Cars.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Will the Sixth-avenue Railroad Directors give take pity upon their tender passengers, and have a few ashfuls of snow thrown in their cars? I should think they would substitute their suffering passengers in that respect, at least. It is trying enough upon the system to hang on a car with both hands, while the high snow which borders the track breaches against your coat, or perchance a wagon is standing within half an inch of the boundary line, and gives you a good bump, which almost persuades you to let go your hold upon the top hand-rail.

By reminding them of their sense of duty to their constituents, you will oblige many of the riders upon said line. SUFFERER.

OBITUARY.

Vincent Pol, Poet.

The Pall Mall Gazette, of Dec. 11, thus announces the death of this distinguished Pole: "Vincent Pol, one of the most eminent of modern Polish poets, died at Mielnik, in Podlachia, last week, in his sixty-sixth year. His Songs of Jassa, written during the insurrection of 1863, in which he fought as a common soldier, soon gained a wide popularity in Poland, and many of them are sung by the Polish peasantry to this day. Scarcely less popular are the 'Song About Our Country' and 'Mickiewicz,' both full of that fervent patriotism which is characteristic of the best Polish poetry of our time, and remarkable for a style at once vigorous and simple. Vincent Pol filled, for some years before his death, the chair of ethnology in the University of Cracow, and was appointed, a few weeks ago, a member of the new Academy of Sciences in that city, but his bad health, which had brought on a temporary attack of blindness, almost incapacitated him for work. He was buried at Cracow, last Friday, in the presence of several thousands of his countrymen, who had assembled to do honor to his memory."

Chancellor Massingberd.

The late English papers bring the announcement of the death of Chancellor Massingberd, one of the most learned and orthodox of the clergy of the Church of England. He had been for some time very ill, and on his last appearance in convocation, of which he was so distinguished a member, his evident infirmity caused great anxiety to his friends. He was educated at Magdalen College, Oxford, and took a second class in Lit. Hum. in 1820. He took his M. A. degree in the following year, and was ordained deacon by the Bishop of Oxford in 1824, and priest by the Bishop of Lincoln in 1826. He had been rector of South Ormsby, Lincolnshire, a family living, throughout his life, and having been a Prebendary of Lincoln Cathedral for many years, became a Chancellor and Canon in 1862. By his influence great improvements were made in the services of Lincoln Cathedral, but he will be remembered chiefly, and his loss will be felt most widely, as a Christian gentleman. No man's judgment was held in higher esteem. As once orthodox and prudent, firm in the maintenance of what he believed to be the truth, and yet conciliatory to those who differed from him, the late Chancellor will be mourned by many who, while holding not (perhaps all of them) old-fashioned opinions, yet hold in the highest regard his genuine piety, unaffected simplicity, and honesty of purpose. The last important question in which the deceased took part was the opposition to Dr. Temple's consecration.

Edwin Norris.

Mr. Edwin Norris died recently in England. The Pall Mall Gazette thus speaks of him: "The deceased, though at the advanced age of seventy-seven, was active to the last; indeed, he died in the midst of the work for which he had set entirely apart the last portion of his more than ordinarily active life. It is this work also by which he will be best known to posterity, viz.: the Cuneiform (Assyrian) Dictionary. Not only did he, in conjunction with Sir Henry Rawlinson, edit, under immense difficulties, the first five volumes of the great Corpus Inscriptionum of Assyrian and Babylonian Cuneiform monuments in the British Museum and elsewhere—each consisting of no fewer than seventy folio plates—but he was also the first who undertook, single-handed, the herculean work of compiling out of those thousands of small fragments of Cuneiform writing, primers, syllabaries, histories, proclamations, charms, &c., that strewed the British Museum receptacles, the first Assyrian dictionary. It is by these two labors, and by the publication of the Tablets left by the late Sir H. Rawlinson, and himself—that studies which he found more or less an obscure mystery have now been brought within the reach of any student competent to handle a cuneiform dictionary. One of the most versatile philologists of our time, he in his leisure periods of his life gave the world the results of his studies in such out-of-the-way idioms as the Fulah language, of which he wrote a grammar, as he did of the Bornu or Kanuri language. He did also a Tahitian version of portions of the Bible, wrote on the Kapur-di-Giri Rock Inscription, edited and translated the Chinese Classics, and contributed besides a number of learned papers to the Asiatic and other societies.

Death of Two Prominent Citizens of Portland, Me.

Mr. Rensselaer Cram, one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens, died in Portland, Me., on Saturday evening, of apoplexy, aged fifty-nine. He was President of the Merchants' Bank and of the Rollins Mill Company, and was also a director in the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad Company.

Mr. Abraham Osgood, another old citizen of Portland, Me., died yesterday morning, aged ninety-two.

Astounding Mesmeric Power.

From the Homward Mail, of India.

A curious case of mesmerism is recorded by the civil surgeon of Hoshunabad. A young woman named Munnee, aged twenty-four, was married some twelve years ago; she, however, did not go to her husband's house for two years afterward. After staying with him for eight days she suddenly became insensible, and remained so for two or three days. She was taken back to her mother, and soon got well. Then follows a very remarkable history. During the next four or five years she never entered her husband's house, although falling insensible and remaining so. He was very kind and attentive to her; she liked him, but whenever he came into her presence she at once sank into this state. This went on till she became emaciated, and exhausted, and at last her mother appealed to the Court for a separate maintenance for her. While she was in Court the husband entered, and she instantly became insensible, and was carried to the hospital, where the case was carefully attended to by Dr. Cullen, in March, this year. While in this state her pulse was even, breathing soft, her body pliant, but she could not be roused. Experiments were carefully made to see if there was no trick about it. While she was in bed, her husband was muffled up, and made to walk through the ward. She said she felt he was near her, and she was by no means well, but did not see him any where about. Next day this experiment was repeated, and she actually became insensible as before. When the husband left the place she recovered. The experiment as to the influence of the husband's presence was tried in all sorts of ways. He was made to pass behind her, and to be near her in a separate room, but it had no effect, but whenever he was brought to look on her face, though muffled up, or disguised as a policeman, as a sepoy, and so forth, she was at once influenced. The experiments continued for about a month, and the conclusion was that the husband unconsciously mesmerized her. The Court came to the conclusion that it was impossible that she could live with him, and a separate allowance was ordered. The husband was asked to try if he could not remove the effect, seeing that he had the power to cause it, but he was quite frightened at the idea of having the power, and could not control it in any way.

Jersey City and the Railroad Companies.

The fact that the railroad companies having their termini in Jersey City do not pay local taxes, has been made the occasion of many "indignation meetings" of tax-payers, and the fact itself has been considered a great wrong. There are within the limits of the county various properties belonging to the railroads, worth altogether over $10,000,000, that is practically exempt from taxation by the local government. But the exemption is not forced by the companies as many have erroneously said, but it is granted by the State. Jersey City has been always proud of the solvent condition of the State Treasury, and of the splendid School fund given by the State for the education of the youth, to say nothing of the permanent works of value to the people which the surplus funds have been used for by the State to erect. Nearly all of this is due to the State's tax upon the railroads. In consideration of the tax paid into her coffers the State relieves the Companies of local taxes. The principle upon which the system was founded was that the locality in which such a railroad company exists, or situated, derives benefits in many ways sufficient to offset the loss of tax money, and the State had always claimed that revenue for itself. In many cases bills have been passed by the Legislature granting exemption from local taxation to industrial corporations, and a strong effort was made a few years ago for the passage of a general law having this effect. The Jersey City people in particular are now working hard to force the railroad companies to pay the local tax, when they have the question in their power, in the case in which the law of exemption has not apply, the city government, has succeeded in getting payment. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company paid the city, a few days ago, the sum of $[illegible] on account of taxes claimed to be held by them, and it is said that they are ready to pay the remainder demanded by the city, over and the deductions shall have been made. Upon the property owned by the New-Jersey Railroad Company, however, taxes have never been paid. The citizens will petition the Legislature, at its next session, to force the payment of taxes upon. The "bullies of power" to bring pressure against them, for the members from inland counties naturally prefer to have their taxes lightened by the State's income from the railroads.

Sabbath-School Anniversary Services.

The anniversary of the Sabbath-school Missionary Society, connected with the Allen-street Presbyterian Church, took place last evening. The attendance was very large and the services interesting. The programme consisted of singing by the children, reading of Scripture, prayer, addresses, and the reading of the twenty-fifth annual report. From this report it appears that the Society was started in 1848 with a small sum of money. The next year $[illegible] was collected and handed over to the missionaries, and from year to year the collections have been invariably increased. The property for the past year were over $1,800. Several of the old officers and managers addressed the meeting last evening, and spoke at some length the great usefulness of the Society. The present officers are—President, Mr. R. P. Tibbalts; Vice-President, Mr. G. B. Beaty; Secretary, Mr. Lewis Sickle; Treasurer, Mr. John H. Gomez, Jr.

THE FEMALE SWINDLER.

Further Facts Regarding the Brown Autheress—Who Is the Fellow Mrs. Dixon Recently Married.

The arrest of the confidence operator who passed herself off in various places as Mrs. Abby Monroe Dixon, the authoress, of Plymouth, Mass., was the chief topic of conversation in church circles yesterday. The woman, whose real name is Dyer, has for several months past been "working" the various aristocratic churches, and maintaining herself into the good graces of leading members of the different congregations. She is particularly fond of the exercises of a Swedenborgian belief, especially professing to be a student of Swedenborgian, and knowing every line in the Bible at heart. She is, to use the stage expression, "letter perfect," and is constantly quoting from Scripture. For the last three weeks she has attended every service in Trinity Church, and has caused no little comment among the congregation that Mr. Middleton, of Hanover and McDougal streets, believing her to be an honest, hard-working, and an aspiring young author, offered, on the occasion of the moment, to pay the amount she had cheated Earle's Hotel of. Mr. Depew, of Mal Ess Wen Twenty-fifth-street, was, but a few years ago, in Counselor Cutler's office. She was then an adventuress, and was raising money to remove her from family. Mr. Depew gave her between $50 and $60, at different times. He saw her frequently, and introduced her to his wife. She obtained board in Madison-avenue, giving Mrs. Depew as a reference, and suddenly left, without paying her bills. Mr. Depew, having heard of her proceedings in various places, that she was Mrs. Abby M. Dixon, told her in the street one day to take care of herself, as she would eventually be arrested. Mr. Depew pronounces her a finished and dangerous confidence woman.

Fires in the City Yesterday.

The shoe store of Mendell Jacobs on the first floor of No. 3 Baxter-street, took fire at 9 o'clock last night, and before it could be extinguished the stock and fixtures were damaged to the extent of $3,000; covered by insurance. A portion of the same floor is occupied by Isodore Cohen as a clothing store; damaged by fire and water $500. The building, two stories high, built of brick, and owned by Morris Levy, of No. 3 Baxter-street, was damaged $1,000; insured. The cause of the fire could not be ascertained.

A corniche in one of the parlors of No. 99 East Thirty-seventh-street, took fire from coming in contact with the gas light at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The building, four stories in height, and occupied as a dwelling by Mr. Anson G. Stokes, was damaged $2,000.

At 6 P. M. yesterday, the residence of Rev. Adolph Heubsen, No. 68 Lexington-avenue, was damaged $60 by fire, originating from one of the window-curtains coming in contact with the gaslight.

At 5 P. M. yesterday the two-story brick building, No. 113 Prince-street, occupied by Albert Dillingham and as a boarding-house, took fire in the attic from some unknown cause. The furniture was damaged $200; insured for $1,000 in the Germania Company, and the building, owned by Peter H. Jackson, was damaged $600; fully insured.

Honors to Dr. Livingstone.

The Italian Government has ordered a gold medal, with a suitable inscription, to be prepared for presentation to Dr. Livingstone. A letter from Rome, dated the 3d inst., says: The medal is to be ready in June, and will be consigned—with an official letter addressed to the great African traveler—to Sir Bartle Frere, in the hope that he may either present it in person, should Livingstone reach the coast in time, or forward it to him by some safe hand. The Commendatore Negri Cristoforo, President of the Italian Geographical Society, has been the prime movers in bringing about this gratifying recognition of Livingstone's labors in behalf of science and humanity; and the Italians generally appear to be delighted with the idea of being the first to tender to him this national proof of the high esteem in which he is held at home. The letter to Livingstone is written in the King's name, and signed by His Majesty's private secretary, the Commendatore Manfrone. The medal is massive gold, and bears on one side the bust of the King, with the legend: "Vittorio Emmanuele II., Re d'Italia;" and on the obverse: "A Davide Livingstone, Vittorio Emmanuele II. 1872."

Fishery Disasters During the Year.

From the Cape Ann (Mass.) Advertiser.

The year now closing, although not so disastrous in regard to loss of life and property attending the fishing business as its predecessor, has not been without its losses. We find by reviewing the list, that twelve vessels and sixty-three lives have been lost the present season, against twenty vessels and 146 lives last year. The total tonnage of vessels lost this season is 57,658—their value, $65,000; insurance, $41,[illegible]. The Georges fleet have been remarkably free from disaster, only one vessel and eleven lives having been lost, against ten vessels and nineteen lives last year. Four vessels and forty-nine lives have been lost in the Bank fishery, this season, against four vessels and twenty-eight lives last year. Seven vessels and two lives have been lost in the shore fishery, and one man lost in the Newfoundland fishery. The other branches of the business have been prosecuted without disaster. Of the sixty-three men lost this year, twenty-one were known to be married, leaving twenty-one widows and thirty-two fatherless children.

The Georgia Senatorship.

In reply to a letter from members of the Georgia Legislature relative to the election of a United States Senator from that State, Mr. Herschel V. Johnson says:

"In reply, I state briefly that my position is the same as indicated to you in my letter of the 18th of October, to which you allude. In that letter I stated to you that I had no desire to be a candidate. This is still my feeling. There are many others who, I understand, are candidates, and earnestly desiring to be elected. I do not wish to anticipate them, or any one of them, from whom the General Assembly may make a selection as able and worthy, if not more so, than I am. Recognizing, however, the right of the State to require my services, and the correlative duty on my part to obey her behest if the General Assembly should tender me the Senatorship, I should accept it."

Deaths in Philadelphia During the Year.

There have been 31,544 deaths in Philadelphia during the year 1872, an increase of 2,[illegible] over last year. Of the deceased persons 9,560 were adults, and 11,944 children; 10,[illegible] were males and 9,970 females. There were 3,[illegible] deaths from small-pox. This disease raged extensively in the City during the early month of the year. It began in September, 1871, and between that time and Dec. 31 there were 1,[illegible] deaths, making the total deaths from small-pox during its prevalence, 1,[illegible].

A WEEK OF ACCIDENTS.—Christmas week is made memorable this year by its intense cold, its great snow-storms, and its awful succession of accidents and disasters of various kinds. Trains are wrecked, and scores of people killed, maimed, or injured. Steamers and vessels are shipwrecked, and many lives lost. In one place a roof falls in crushing those beneath; in another locality a floor gives way, and a crowd of people killed or injured. Churches and circuses burn up, and even kitchen ranges explode, scattering cooking utensils and killing the cooks. Casualties are occurring on every hand, and who shall say he is safe? Now is the time, if ever, to have a general accident policy in the TRAVELERS' INSURANCE COMPANY, of Hartford, Conn. The Company is both able and willing to furnish pecuniary indemnity for death or disabling injury by accident, and has already paid between sixteen and seventeen thousand claimants.—World.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

Although two sections were announced to occur at the Exchange on Saturday, Dec. 28, neither were consummated, the sale in charge of H. E. Chase of seven lots, No. 276 West-street, was postponed because the reason that the suit involving the disposition of the property had been settled, while in relation to the sale of two lots with buildings, on Centre, near Pearl-street, by James A. Fleming, Stephen H. Olin, Esq., referee, nothing was said or done, either the adjournment or result being kept in abeyance. This last state of affairs is not at all singular, however, for Mr. Olin seldom allows the public any information concerning any legal sale he may have in charge.

THE WEEK'S SALES.

The holiday season, during the first portion of the week, and the great storm, passed pretty well demonstrated business at the Exchange during the past week, and as a consequence the attendance was extremely slight, and the sales made few in number. The sales held have all been small transactions, but none the less they show the real estate market still somewhat more than Tuesday, Dec. 24, was the business day of the week, when property to the value of $[illegible] was sold, [illegible] the largest for the week previous.

With the Exchange, and in glancing over the transactions of the past twelve months, it may be noted that there has been very great activity, with the result that the market has generally given satisfaction to great firmness, and when desirable property was changed hands at advances over previous prices has been made. But few large public sales have been made, as much of extensive nature of realty has been offered, but all private contract the advance in prices has been shown in up-town uptown property, while business generally has only been fair, but with the real estate market has been principally confined to lots on Fifth and Madison-avenues, Fifty-third-street, in lots on the Grand Boulevard and other avenues in the vicinity of Central Park, and, of late, in lots located on the avenues to the Harlem River. In the Fifth-ward of Two Hundred and Fifty-second-street lots have been sold, in which, for some time, the year, the sale, when sold, the price has been [illegible] Lots on Lone Island, in the vicinity of Whitestone and Jamaica, have been most readily disposed of in large quantities, and thousands of acres have been held in New-Jersey, in all sections within twenty miles of New-York, nearly all of which have been attended with eminent success. In this branch of trade, the sale of farms, in the vicinity of Newark, is expected as soon as the spring opens, and with the probable construction of an underground railroad, it may be expected that speculation will extend to those located, and beyond to a very great extent.

BROOKLYN REAL ESTATE.

In Brooklyn during the past year the real estate market has been stagnant, and what with high taxes and uncertainty regarding the administration of affairs, but little real estate has changed hands, and few transfers have been carried through. The recent success attained, however, in the disposition of the large tract of property located just in the city limits, belonging to the Lefferts estate, would lead to the hope for a larger share of affairs are long, and for a more active market.

RENTS, &C.

In relation to rents for the coming year, it is as yet too early to attempt to express any decided opinion regarding the course of the market. In this particular we have been wonderfully favored with fair prices, as we come. The general impression exists that house rents will be somewhat lower, and this opinion is presented upon the fact that so many large course actions building projects in course of construction but not yet finished; lot, it is asserted, if these buildings could be readily rented at good figures, paying a fair interest upon the investment, extension would fine no difficulty in obtaining money to complete them. Whether this is true or not, time will soon determine. As to business property, rents will be regulated as usual by the supply and demand, for a good deal of business property located will always bring a good rental, and one paying a fair percentage upon the investment.

THE WEEK'S PROPOSED SALES.

For the present week the auctions projected are [illegible] noticeable, being all supreme Court sales, in somewhat, and but few in number. The following is a list of such as will be offered at the Exchange, at which the property noted will be offered, viz.:

Today, (Monday), Dec. 30.

THE

Consolidated Mortgage Bonds

OF THE

ST. LOUIS

AND

SOUTH-EASTERN RAILWAY CO.

(CONSOLIDATED.)

Of Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee.

Are now 9 per cent., with Sinking Fund of 1 1-2 per cent. of Gross Earnings.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN GOLD IN NEW-YORK. INTEREST SEMI-ANNUALLY, FEBRUARY AND AUGUST.

This road is formed by the consolidation of the St. Louis and Southern, the Nashville, Shelbyville, and Decatur, and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Companies, and connects the Ohio River at Louisville, Evansville, and Cairo, with ST. LOUIS and CHICAGO by NASHVILLE, MONTGOMERY, ATLANTA, MACON, MOBILE, SAVANNAH, and CHARLESTON. The capital stock and indebtedness are represented by only 18 per mile.

TWO SHORTLY HARVESTED CROPS, BEFORE THE CONSOLIDATION, ALREADY BROUGHT AN AVERAGE OF $[illegible] PER MILE, AND ARE LIKELY TO OPERATE THE ROAD AND PAY THE INTEREST ON THE ENTIRE BONDED DEBT.

These bonded and independent sales of this road are guaranteed and fully equipped. The Consolidated Bonds are issued at the rate of $[illegible] per mile for the purpose of making a single road, connecting Louisville and Cairo, and supplying means to meet the rapidly increasing business. Sixteen have been sold, and we offer a limited amount at 90 and accrued interest in currency.

The St. Louis Republican Trade recently issued a series of resolutions expressing the opinion "THAT THIS WILL BECOME ONE OF THE BEST PAYING LINES EMANATING OUT OF ST. LOUIS," complimenting the stockholders on "THE HONORABLE AND ABLE MANAGEMENT OF THE PROPERTY," expressing the belief "THAT THE SECURITY OFFERED BY THE CONSOLIDATED MORTGAGE BONDS TO THE AMOUNT OF $[illegible],000 PER MILE IS GOOD, AND RECOMMENDING THEM WITHOUT HESITATION AS AN INVESTMENT TO CAPITALISTS, BOTH AT HOME AND ABROAD."

Under the terms of the Consolidated Mortgage parties holding Bonds issued by the St. Louis and Southeastern Railway Company of Illinois and Indiana, or by the Evansville, Henderson, and Nashville Railroad Company, (7 per cent. currency,) are entitled to the privilege of exchanging the same for the Consolidated Bonds, and can do so upon application.

We substantially recommend these Bonds as an investment Railway Security.

7 Per Cent. Gold

First Mortgage Bonds of the Springfield and Illinois South-Eastern Railway.

We believe the above Bonds, at the price we are asking for them, offer greater inducements to investors than any railway bonds upon the market. They are a first lien of only $16,000 per mile upon a completed road, fully equipped, having a TRAFFIC GUARANTEE by which it is estimated that from one to two hundred thousand dollars of these bonds will be redeemed at par and secured interest annually by lot, thus giving the fortunate holders of the drawn bonds over 10 per cent. advance on their investment, and nearly 8 per cent. interest until the bonds are drawn.

We invite the attention of capitalists to this security as a particularly desirable one, and shall be glad to furnish pamphlets, and maps, and all particulars, upon application.

7 PER CENT. GOLD

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS

At 92 1-2 and Accrued Interest.

Issue, $20,000 per mile. Subscriptions to the Capital Stock over $3,000,000. Road runs through a populous, and rich agricultural district from Oswego to Lewiston, of the Niagara River, with branches to Suffolk and Sheepshead Bridge. Connects at either end with leading Trunk Lines; is admirably located for securing large and profitable travel and through business; 35 miles of track already laid; and when finished, 120 miles, under contract to be finished within ensuing year. Pamphlets with full particulars furnished.

We commend the above loan as one of the most reliable and attractive on the market. For sale by

GREATEST NEW ROAD.

The New-York Midland must rank as the greatest of the new railroads built for the United States for many years.

Located great distance ahead of any other competitor, it becomes inevitable that New-York City is place of end of the Central, and it is self-evident that this secure or possible would be infinitely increased. THE NEW-YORK MIDLAND HAS NEW-YORK CITY FOR ITS STARTING-POINT.

The receipts of the great lines running west from New-York City (the New-York Central, the Erie, the Pennsylvania Central) place them first in rank in the country. THE MIDLAND RUNS WEST FROM NEW-YORK CITY, in rivalry with these three, and introduced to be THE SHORTEST LINE.

Each of the other three competitors contract those which the Midland will have, and where double-track of and equipment, and it is very HIGHLY MORTGAGED.

Of Gold Bonds are offered for sale:

THE NEW-YORK MIDLAND CONSOLIDATED BONDS (secured since their issue by a second mortgage) the most attractive and profitable of all the issues.

THE GUARANTEED FIRST MORTGAGE 7 PER CENT. GOLD BONDS (issued on the Montclair Road, the oldest road through New-Jersey,) the cheapest of all the first mortgage issues.

SEARCHING THE RUINS.

One of the Burned Bodies Found in Centre-Street.

The Work of Examining the Debris Commenced—Private Subscriptions for the Expenses—A Melancholy Scene.

The embers of the Centre-street fire were extinguished at a late hour on Saturday night, and yesterday morning a party of firemen began exploring the ruins. At 12½ o'clock, Assistant Engineer Cook, of Engine Company No. 1, discovered what at first appeared to be a small heap of bones, crushed between two heavy beams in the middle of the débris, near Centre-street. A closer inspection revealed the charred remains of a human body, and the firemen quickly set to work with axes and picks to cut away the surrounding ice. Meanwhile the crowd was forced to vacate the opposite sidewalk, and platoons of police were stationed at Leonard and Worth streets to keep the space opposite the ruins clear of bystanders. In a few minutes the body was taken out, and, closely wrapped in a blanket, was laid on a stretcher and carried to the Sixth Precinct Station-house. The body was barely recognizable, even as that of a human being, the lower portions being entirely burned away, while the head was horribly scorched and mutilated. Only a small portion of the face above the nose remained, and the right arm was entirely gone, the left hand being the best preserved member. The body was laid in a back room of the station-house, where it was closely scrutinized by the relatives of the victims, and quickly identified by John Stewart, of No. 97 Charlton-street, as the body of his sister, Jane Stewart, seventeen years of age, and late an employe in the book-binery of Archer, Anderson & Co. The body was identified by two chased gold rings on the second finger of the left hand, which, by accident, had escaped the fire. The rings were also identified by a Mr. Caldwell, a jeweller of John-street, who made and sold them to the father of the deceased. The body lay in the Station-house during the remainder of the day, and was viewed by several spectators, nearly women, all of whom declared it the most horrible sight they had ever looked upon. The relatives of the other victims returned to the ruins, and, stationing themselves on the opposite sidewalk, watched the work of the searchers with melancholy interest.

Yesterday morning Coroner Herrman prepared a card to the public, guaranteeing the commencement of the search on Tuesday morning. Coroner Young and Capt. Kennedy volunteered to share the expense with Coroner Herrman, and began the work at once, but no definite arrangement was reached until an hour later, when Judge Dowling tendered $200 in cash to Capt. Kennedy, and directed him to employ a gang of laborers and begin the search immediately. To the amount subscribed by Judge Dowling, Mr. Morgan Jones added $200, and 100 laborers were set to work with shovels at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, a few minutes after the discovery and removal of the first body by the firemen. Twenty-five firemen, under Assistant Engineer Bates, and an equal number of Police, under Capt. Kennedy, were detailed, and the work went on rapidly, notwithstanding the formidable obstacles of iron presses and columns, and the thick covering of snow and ice left by the storm of Thursday. After several cart-loads of debris had been removed to the opposite side of the street, it was decided to pull down the single wall of the "tower," which was cracked and liable to fall at any moment on the workers below. A strong rope was attached, and, after considerable resistance, the massy wall yielded, and came down with a crash, sending up a cloud of dust. The outer wall of No. 97 Centre-street, a portion of Middleton's three-story building, offered great resistance to the efforts of the firemen, but was eventually pushed over by means of ladders. The laborers then returned to work, and by 5½ P. M., although no more bodies were found, an immense quantity of rubbish had been removed, and a way cut to the centre of the ruins. The débris consisted of large iron columns, presses, frames, and printers' implements of every description, half-burned books and newspapers, bricks, timber, fragments of furniture, mostly reduced to charcoal, and remnants of stairways, all being covered with between two and three inches of ice. Several packages of unbound books had been buried and twisted into fantastic shapes, and under a covering of ice so closely resembled the ribs of a human body, that the ice and charcoal had to be broken away before the real character of the mass became apparent. The work was continued until near 6 P. M., when darkness set in, and the laborers were dismissed with orders to report for work at 7 o'clock this morning. It is expected that a large number of laborers will be brought from the workhouse today, as Judge Dowling yesterday suggested to the Commissioners of Charities and Correction that 100 of the able-bodied men who have been sent to Blackwell's Island for short terms for intoxication and disorderly conduct, should be immediately removed to the Tombs Prison and put to work on the ruins, the remainder of their term of imprisonment being remitted in return for their labor. Coroner Herrman also sent a letter to Capt. Kennedy, offering to guarantee the payment of the laborers, and promising an immediate commencement of the search.

Yesterday Capt. Kennedy, in company with a TIMES reporter, made an exploration of the western portion of the ruins, entering from Leonard-street. The debris is some 30 feet deep, and cannot possibly be entirely cleared for three or four days. The beams are imbedded in a mass of ice, which must be cut away before they can be taken out. At the bottom lie an immense number of bricks. In consequence, too, of the charred condition of everything, the search must be conducted carefully, and several of the laborers will be required to examine the débris while the others throw it up with their shovels; otherwise, the remains of the bodies might be broken by the shovels, and thrown away with the burned paper and wood, from which portions of the body found yesterday were scarcely distinguishable, and, even with these precautions, it is unlikely that all the bodies will be recovered. This morning the space between Leonard and Worth streets will be kept clear of the crowd, in order to give room for the workers, and to prevent citizens from venturing among the ruins.

The first work today will be the removal of the large iron tank in the top of the tower, which will probably involve the demolition of the entire structure, and add considerably to the wreck and the work of searching.

Yesterday a deputation of Internationals, headed by Theodore H. Banks, waited on Inspector McDermott, at Police Head-quarters, and requested permission to dig out the bodies of the victims of the Centre-street fire. The Inspector commended their humane intentions, but informed them that he had no authority in the matter. Before leaving, however, they learned that the work had already been commenced, and departed satisfied.

Helping the Homeless Boys.

The street boys' life, at the best, is a pitiable one, but, at present, when the streets are covered with snow, the poor fellows feet are generally soaking wet, and as they cannot build their little fires in out-of-the-way places they must endure the bitter cold from morning to night, and their lot is hard indeed. The generous responses to the TIMES appeal in behalf of the poor children have enabled the Children's Aid Society to provide many of these lads with comfortable under-clothing. The boys of the Rivington-street Lodging-house looked quite gay and happy last night, dressed in new flannel shirts, as they listened to the wise counsel of the gentlemen who meet them on Sunday evenings. The boys attend these meetings in large numbers, and listen respectfully to the speakers. Mr. Howard Potter conducted the exercises last night. He read and explained to the boys the second chapter of Matthew, and afterwards recited, with great acceptance, the beautiful and touching German poem of Dr. Curtmeyer, earnestly exhorting the moral of the tale. A most pathetic appeal was delivered by Mr. Chas. Merrill on "Thankfulness." Mr. Henry E. Hawley also spoke to the boys, and kindly conducted the singing.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Talmage—"Why was this Waste?"—A Sermon of Advice, but Heavenly Assurance.

The congregation of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage have temporarily secured the Brooklyn Academy of Music as their house of worship, and assembled in it yesterday morning, for the first time. Every nook of the spacious building, except in the topmost gallery, was filled. Mr. Talmage preached from the stage, the scenery and slides in the rear of which were hidden by a large red curtain. A stage in the space allotted to the orchestra was substituted for an organ. Mr. Talmage's sermon was on the subject of giving, his text being taken from St. Mark, fourteenth chapter and fourth verse: "Why was this waste?" part of the story of the woman with the alabaster box of precious ointment. There is nothing, he said, that shakes a strong man so close as to see generosity in others. Judas cannot bear to see an alabaster box broken at the feet of the Saviour. A man gives a thousand dollars to the missionary cause, and Judas cries, "Why this waste?" In it waste to comfort the distressed, to instruct the ignorant, to capture for God regiments of men who fight with quick feet were trampling the way to hell? What have you to show for the exertions of the past two years? Showing really a loss of souls? Why, your silver! Why, your gold! Why, your clothing? Ah! there was no waste. All I hear in this sermon you put into that collection! Ah, you have been!
